Farm Bureau Reports Plans For Coming Year And Work In Year Past

Progress Made in Ulster County's Basic Industry That Produces More Than $6,000,000 of Gross Income Each Year —County First in Value of Poultry Products Sold and Sixth in Value of Fruit Produced in the State.

Following is the annual report of the Farm Department of the Ulster County Farm and Home Bureau Association for period from December 1, 1931 to December 1, 1932, as submitted by Albert Kurdt, manager and W. J. Clark, assistant manager:

1. Introduction:

The purpose of this annual report is to give a complete summary, analysis and interpretation of the work carried on during the past fiscal year, by the Ulster County Farm Bureau. In addition to carrying on a community and county program, the Farm Bureau is the agency through which the Agricultural Extension Service of the United States Department of Agriculture and the New York State College of Agriculture is brought to the county.

The report should be of value to officers and committeemen in building a still stronger program and making the Farm Bureau of still greater service to the farmers of the county. It also serves as a method of giving the public a true picture of what the Farm Bureau is and what it is trying to do.

2. Status of the organization:

(a) Form of organization:

1. Membership—The Farm Bureau is an education-service organization consisting of members who pay an annual fee of $5.00. It is one of the three departments of the Farm and Home Bureau Association. A number of business men support the Farm Bureau with their membership. This support is made evident by the membership card which is usually displayed in their place of business.

The membership is divided into eighteen organized communities, and the city of Kingston; each with the following paid membership for 1932:

2—Board of Directors

The board of directors consists of nine members elected for a term of three years each by the members at the annual meeting. The directors have direct supervision and control of all finances, they employ the managerial help and other employes, establish the policies and have general supervision of the work. They meet regularly on the first Tuesday of each month. The president or chairman of the board executes a co-operative agreement between the New York State College of Agriculture and the County Agricultural Agent, who is also manager of the Farm Bureau.

The board of directors consisted of the following for 1932.

C. C. DuMond, Ulster Park, president; Fred DuBois, New Paltz, vice president; E. W. Hathaway, Kingston, secretary-treasurer; Millard Davis, Kerhonkson; James T. Tucker, Wallkill; W. J. Haviland, Marlborough; W. T. Jenkins, Highland; L. B. Davis, Olive Bridge; George Saile, Saugerties.

3—Cooperating Agencies

The following agencies cooperate in financing the Ulster County Farm Bureau and the Extension Service thereby brought to the county:

a. United State Department of Agriculture.

b. New York State College of Agriculture.

c. Ulster County Board of Supervisors.

d. The members of the Farm Bureau.

The financial support from State and Federal funds goes directly to the agents in the form of salary. During the past year these agencies contributed $2,400 toward the salaries of the two agents employed by the Farm Bureau.

(b)—Committeemen and their function.

The members in each of the eighteen organized communities elect from four to eight committeemen, at one of the regular meetings during the winter, or they may be appointed by the president of the Farm Bureau. Each committee meets at least once during the year to develop a community program, select project leaders, discuss county-wide activities and make plans for the membership campaign. The committeemen are responsible for the local programs and

Helen Shea Heads Child Play Cast

The title role in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" to be presented by the Clare Tree Major Children's Theatre on December 9 at the Broadway Theatre is played by Miss Helen Shea, who is now in her second season with the Children's Theatre. Prior to her engagement with Mrs. Major, she appeared with much success in the road production of "Broadway".

Another principal is Miss Mary Emerson, a protege of the late John Craig, with whom she appeared in a series of Shakespearean productions. In addition to appearances with the St. James Stock Company in Boston and an engagement with Miss Fiske on her last tour, Miss Emerson played the role of the ingenue in the original company of "Street Scene", which ran for 600 performances at the Playhouse in New York city.

Seats for the performance of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" are now on sale at the box office. In view of the large advance sale, it is suggested that tickets be purchased now.

Von Schleicher to Head German Group

Berlin, Dec. 3 (AP).—General Kurt Von Schleicher today assembled a new cabinet to guide Germany out of domestic disunion, and every indication pointed to a government similar in makeup to the administration of Franz Von Papen.

Like Van Papen, General Schleicher will face the Reichstag December 6 clothed with presidential authority to dissolve the law makers if that drastic course becomes necessary.

Netherless the "power behind the Von Papen government" went about his task with the idea of making his cabinet a "government of conciliation," openly inviting co-operation from the Reichstag.

The ministries of agriculture, economics and labor were the fiscal points of attention, because it is in those posts that changes likely will come.

Religion, Practical Or Theoretical Told To Ministers Friday

The following paper entitled "Religion, Practical or Theoretical?" was read by Rabbi L. J. Y. Eppstein of Temple Emanuel at the regular meeting of the Kingston Ministerial Association held Friday at the Rondout Presbyterian Church:

The word "religion" has been given so many definitions that there may well be some danger lest it soon lose all power to denote anything definite to the average man. By some "religion" has been defined in such broad and loose terms that even Atheism could be called "a religion;" in view of this fact, it would be difficult to imagine any system of thought which could not be called "religious" according to some definition or other. In this paper, however, I shall use the word to denote your religion and mine without attempting formal definition.

Religion has various aspects, two of which, the theoretical and the practical, correspond roughly to what on another plane of endeavor are called Pure Science and Applied Science. Some scientists, we know, are concerned only with the theoretical study of Physics; to such the correct theorem, the exact definition, the true formulation of a mechanical law, the degree of mathematical vision, are all matters of paramount importance, whereas the use of physical science by the engineer or the adaptation of scientific principles in the engineer's art, may be of no interest whatever. To the engineer, on the other hand, pure science may seem of subordinate importance, proving its value only through the aid it renders to him in his practical undertakings. The physicist is primarily interested in Truth, the engineer in the use of truth in work. The physicist will reject a formula even though it be useful to the engineer if it fails to meet the theoretical test of mathematical research; the engineer, for his part, will pay scant attention to a formla which he cannot see even though it be mathematically correct. Thus the physicist is essentially a theorist, a philosopher, while the engineer is a "practical man."

Now if religion were purely a philosophy, we should all, like the physicist, be students of truth for its own sake. Even the most recondite propositions of theology and religious ethics should count more with us than the translation into living practice of the message of the Decalogue or of Micah IV: 1-5, of the sermon on the Mount or of the 13th chapter of 1st Corinthians. It would be of little importance to us how we act before God and how we deal with our neighbor, but it would seem of supreme importance that we define the concept of God correctly and that we criticize our neighbor's faith in a false creed. That even his "false" creed might enable him to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with his God, would seem to us irrelevant, and we should find the dissenter none the less culpable.

Mistaken Emphasis

In certain periods of the history of our religions, strange as it may seem to us today, this mistaken emphasis on the theoretical aspect of religion dominated church and synagogue. The result was intolerant orthodoxy; false emphasis on true belief became the enemy of truth, and we know that progress in religious thinking came often only at the price of revolt against the authority of ecclesiastical officers and teachers. How much of this tendency to sacrifice practical religion on the altar of theoretical religion, we ourselves have inherited from the past which brought us into being, it would be difficult to determine. Certainly such associations as this in which we are assembled today should do a good deal to help us get rid of it, as the Good Will Movement sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America has done on a larger scale.

Incidents such as the following, which I experienced, are becoming continually rarer. My synagogue was having a special service at which it was known that many Christians would be present in the congregation. I thought it would be very appropriate to invite a Christian minister to offer a prayer at this service, and accordingly did so. Now as you doubtless know, centuries of attempts to convert the Jews to the Christian creed have made my people rather sensitive on the subject. Some of these attempts, as that by the Spanish church, have been brutal and coercive; others have doubtless been prompted by idealistic zeal and unselfish devotion. But if you want to know how we Jews feel about it, suppose that our positions as to numbers and influence in the world were reversed; suppose there were only a few million Christians scattered throughout the world, that the Jews were numbered by the hundreds of millions; and suppose then that we Jews kept trying to persuade you that you ought to be faithless to your faith and ought to accept ours. I imagine you would deem it rather unchivalrous of us, so say the least! Well, as the result of these centuries of efforts to convert us, my people have, as I said, grown perhaps oversensitive on certain points. Accordingly when I asked the Rev. to offer a prayer at my services, I took the liberty of reminding him that my people are Unitarians, and that although he had, of course, perfect liberty to say whatever he was inclined to say, any reference in his prayer to the 2nd and 3rd Persons of the Trinity would be certain to upset many of the congregation. Upon due consideration, the Rev

Edelmuth Changes Food Orders Charges Schmid

Charge Made That Commissioner Erased Names of Grocers From Some of Cards and Wrote in Names of Those of His Choice—Complaints and Protests Made.

The following communication received today from Alfred Schmid, president of the Board of Public Welfare, speaks for itself:

Kingston, N. Y., Dec. 3, 1932.
Editor, Kingston Daily Freeman,
Kingston, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

There recently appeared an editorial in The Leader under the caption, "Who Said 'Politics'." It stated in part that I would probably eventually learn that my efficiency and value to the taxpayers will depend to a great extent on my ability to work harmoniously with others.

With Commissioner John Lang I have worked very peacefully and also with Commissioner William F. Edelmuth up until just a few months ago when, from various sources, I received complaints in regard to the issuing of food orders.

A little over a year ago, in order to obtain the 40 per cent reimbursement from the state on our home relief expenses, we were obliged to issue orders on stores. The Welfare Board decided that all persons receiving relief were to be permitted to continue to obtain their food from the same store where they had been accustomed to trading before they had applied to the city for aid.

We felt we had no right to compel a family to patronize any particular store. Therefore, every person, before receiving his first food order, was asked where he wished to obtain his weekly supply of food and the name of that grocer was written on the investigator's card and filed away. Each week thereafter the food order was made out to the grocer whose name appeared on the card.

Commissioner Edelmuth erased the names of the grocers from some of these cards and instead wrote in the names of two or three grocers of his choice. Few noticed the following week, until they were ready to hand their regular grocer the food order, that it was made out on another grocery store.

The recipient of the order usually objected. He claimed the new grocer was higher priced and, consequently, he received less for his $3 or $4 food order than what he had been accustomed to receiving from his regular grocer with whom he perhaps had been trading for a number of years. Some objected because the new grocer was blocks away and perhaps had only a little store and, in his estimation, a very limited variety of food stuffs while his regular grocer had not only a larger store with a greater variety of foods, but was much more convenient for him as it was only "just around the corner."

The grocers protested. Some blamed the employes of the Home Relief Office while others called it "dirty politics" and blamed it on the Mayor. Grocers who had customers taken away from them, whom they had trusted and cared for before they had applied for aid of the city, were naturally incensed and especially if the family was large and had been a good paying customer during the past few years. The complaints and protests came in from all sides.

I immediately asked Commissioner Edelmuth for an explanation. He admitted that he had made changes on our records and argued that he had the right to do it. When I explained to him that the mayor, as well as the home relief employes, was being blamed for his actions, he replied that that did not make him any difference and that if I wanted to I could publish it in the papers and that he would be willing to take the blame.

I then brought the matter to the attention of Mayor Carey. The mayor informed me that he had already brought the matter to the attention of Commissioner Edelmuth and that he had also admitted to him that he had made alterations on some of the cards but seemed unconcerned that others were being blamed. He further, of his own accord, informed me that although he had appointed him as a commissioner he did not have the power to remove him from office as that power was only vested in the Common Council.

One can hardly expect me to work harmoniously with Commissioner Edelmuth, who seems to have little respect for our mayor, the man who appointed him, no regard for the employes of our Home Relief Office or our grocers, and seemingly little consideration for some of the poor, needy people whom he has tried to dictate to.

Very truly yours,
ALFRED SCHMID, Pres.
Board of Public Welfare.

Judge Traver Sustains Writs

County Judge Frederick G. Traver today sustained writs of habeas corpus which were sworn out by the eight negroes who were recently arrested by the police in connection with the possession of dope in the lower portion of the city. The men were being held to await the action of the grand jury.

Argument on the writs was held this morning before County Judge Traver with Assistant District Attorney J. Edward Conway appearing for The People and Attorney Robert J. Howard for the defendants.

The writs were secured on the theory that the men were being held in the county jail under illegal commitments. It was shown that the commitments, which were the regular form blanks used in the city court, had been signed by the clerk of the court, Mary B. Terwilliger, and in the body of the commitment she had failed to insert the name of City Judge Culloton in the place of the word "me" which is sufficient when the City Judge signs the paper. The clerk of the court has power to sign the commitment paper but in that instance the commitment must state that the defendant has been held by the City Judge, Bernard A. Culloton. The commitments which were attacked failed to contain the name of the city judge and stated that the commitment had been "granted by me" and bore the signature of the clerk of the court. It was contended that in this instance the failure to insert the city judge's name instead of the word "me" had resulted in the clerk of the court being the committing party.

Judge Traver sustained the writs in all instances where this error was evident. Mr. Howard stated that this was an attempt to delegate power to the clerk and that the commitments were therefore invalid.

There were eight persons involved in the matter, Robert Roy Brown, Lawrence Brown, Arthur Jackson, Henry Morton, Albert Snyder, William Pitchard and Emanuel Nickelson. New papers were immediately prepared by the district attorney and were placed in the hands of an officer to be served as soon as the defendants were released from custody under the writs.

Garner Moves to Submit Wet Bill

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP).—Despite a setback in the judiciary commitee, Speaker Garner moved determinedly ahead today with plans to force a vote in the house Monday on the Democratic outright repeal of the 18th Amendment proposal.

Asserting he was going to "keep faith" with the people who in November elected him vice president, Garner said either Representative Sumners, a fellow Texan, or Representative Rainey of Illinois, Democratic floorleader, would be recognized to offer the proposed constitutional amendment under suspension of the rules.

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS SEE EXTRA SESSION

Washington, Dec. 3. (AP).—Despite President-elect Roosevelt's word that he does not now see that a special session of congress will be necessary, some Democratic leaders expressed the belief today that such a meeting is inevitable.

They are concerned over the shortness of the session opening Monday and the controversial issues involved in the ambitious Democratic legislative program, but nevertheless continued to organize their drive to jam their proposals through the "lame duck" gathering.

Further Savings As Farm And Home Bureaus And 4-H Club Reduce 1933 Requests

Board of Supervisors Received Requests of County Organizations With Substantial Reductions Over Amounts Asked a Year Ago—Annual Report of Farm Bureau Received—Other Business.

Further mensures of economy made their appearances before the board of supervisors Friday evening following the 10 per cent reduction in salary which the supervisors took Thursday evening and the general cut of 10 per cent in the pay of all county officials and employes.

The Ulster County Farm Bureau requested $3,500 for 1933, a saving of $1,000 over the 1932 appropriation of $4,500.

The Ulster County Home Bureau requested $2,700 for 1933 instead of the appropriation of $3,000 which was made in 1932. The 4-H Club or Junior Extension Work Department also cooperated in the move for economy and asked for $2,800 for 1933 instead of the sum of $3,500 which was appropriated for 1932.

An appropriation of $4,000 for the work of the Accredited Herd Association in 1933 was requested, the same appropriation as was made in 1932.

All of the requests were received and referred to the committee on appropriations.

The annual report of the Ulster County Farm Bureau was received and filed and a full report will be found in another column of this issue of The Freeman.

Printing Recommendations.

The Committee on Printing also eliminated a recommendation which was incorporated in its original report. In the original report the committee recommended that $3,000 be appropriated for the printing of the 1932 enrollment. At Friday evening's session Supervisors Dusinberre, Voss and Feeney, the committee on printing, moved to amend their report previously made and strike from the report the recommendation that $3,000 be assessed on the county for printing the enrollment of 1932. The committee's amended report was to the effect that $23,736.90 be raised to pay printing bills. This amended report was received and the resolution by Dusinberre, Voss and Feeney that the sum of $23,736.90 be raised on the county to pay bills audited to that amount, went over under the rule.

J. Charles Snyder, recommended by Philip Elting, the Republican County Chairman, for the office of Commissioner of Elections, and the recommendation by William R. Kraft, the Democratic County Chairman, of Harry B. Sleight as a Commissioner of Elections, was received and on resolution of J. L. Rowe they were duly designated by the board as Commissioners of Election for the ensuing year. The designation, which is filed with the county clerk, was passed around and signed by the supervisors.

A resolution by Supervisors Terwilliger, Voss and Wright, authorized the assessment of unpaid water rents in the Wallkill, Phoenicia and Marlborough Water Districts against the properties together with 10% additional. When the water rents are collected they will be turned over to the supervisor of the town in which the water district lies and the rents will be paid by the supervisor to the water commissioner of the respective districts.

Supervisor E. Rowe offered a resolution that there be raised on the county of Ulster the sum of $600 to be used by the Pistol Permit Issuing office. The law makes necessary for the owner of a pistol to secure a license which necessitates the taking of finger-prints, etc. This additional work is handled through the issuing office which is under the jurisdiction of the County Judge. A report is made by the County Judge as to the expenditure of the fund. Over under the rule.

Supervisor E. Rowe offered a resolution that there be raised on the towns of the First Supervisory District the sum of $270 to pay the increased salary of the district superintendent of the district. Over. This sum is 10% less than last year.

Supervisor Elsworth offered a similar resolution regarding the Second Supervisors District on which $360 will be raised. This also represents a 10% reduction over last year. Over.

Supervisor Markle of the Third Supervisors District offered a similar resolution in regard to the raising of $270 on that district. This too shows a 10% reduction over 1932. Over.

Supervisor Lyons of the Fourth Supervisors District offered a resolution to raise $270 on that district, a 10% reduction over 1932. Over.

Resolutions from the previous session were called up and adopted.

Sheriff Reports.

Sheriff Wright J. Smith reported that he had received $0.10 for transportation during the past year and that that sum had been turned over to the county treasurer. Received and referred to the committee on sheriff.

There were 20 supervisors present when the meeting was called to order

President of Village Of Ellenville Dead

Peter Bellman, president of the village of Ellenville and particularly well known for the very active interest he took in the conduct of village affairs, died suddenly at his home in Ellenville at 3 o'clock this morning, from a heart attack. Mr. Bellman served for many years as clerk of records in the Kings County Surrogate's Court. Following his retirement he came to Ellenville and built a very attractive residence property on Tuthill avenue, where he had since made his home. He took a deep interest in all matters connected with the conduct of public affairs in his adopted town and was very active in forwarding movements which he believed to be for tits best interest. Those who did not always agree with him in the positions he took admired him for his straightforward attitude.

Uptown Merchants Plan For Christmas

The executive committee of the Uptown Business Men's Association has recommended that the stores begin their Christmas opening on December 15.

This recommendation will govern most of the big stores as well as many of the others and beginning Thursday, December 15, these stores will remain open evenings until 9 o'clock, until Christmas.

The Uptown Association is sponsoring the general decoration being done in the uptown district this year, such as placing evergreen trees on the poles along the street, etc., but the expense is being borne by the individual merchants participating. Heretofore the expense of street decoration at Christmas time has been financed by the association, but with the reduction of dues to $1 a year this is no longer possible.

U. S. SENATE FACES HEAVY CALENDAR

Washington, Dec. 3. (AP).—Though its legislative program depends to a large extent on house activities, the senate faces a crowded business calendar of its own in the session beginning Monday.

Ratification of treaties and nominations are a constitutional function of the senate, aside from the consideration of general legislation in collaboration with the house.

Two treaties of major importance and scores of weighty nominations await its action, though with a Democratic President coming into office March 4, Democratic leaders are expected to block action on all but urgent appointments.

Treasury Receipts.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press.)

Yale Bans Beef.

New Haven, Conn.—Corpulent campus cops—almost a tradition at Yale—have been told they must reduce their waistlines. The University's health department has issued an order requiring them to report in the gymnasium for daily workouts.

Oiyez! Oiyez!

Farmington, Conn.—'Twas weeks before Christmas, so this mouse figured it had a right to stir—and stir it did.

It fell from the ceiling of the court room right on the head of Judge J. Ellicott Hewes. Witnesses howled as the judge with greater alacrity than dignity swept the intruder off his head. It scampered away.

Let 'er Rip.

Millenville, N. J.—This city isn't afraid of the steam cars any more. The city commission repealed an ancient ordinance last night which prohibited railroad trains from passing through the city at more than eight miles an hour.

Life is Crool.

Chicago — Judge Craig Hood awarded Mrs. Jewell Wafer a divorce from her husband, Roy, on grounds of cruelty, because, it was alleged, he insisted on bringing home part of his grocery business and eating wafers in bed.

It Pays to Work.

Kane, Pa.—Employes of the Kushequa Brick Company plant in Kane—deep in the big game country—asked a holiday to go deer hunting. Because there was a rush of orders only half the force was allowed to go.

While the less fortunate ones followed their daily tasks, thinking of their lucky friends roaming the woods, two bucks dashed into the brick yard. Amazed workers grabbed rifles and brought down one of the deer—an eight-point buck. The employes who took the holiday returned empty-handed.

Joe's Rest Disturbed.

Chicago—More strange doings: Joe Wujcik couldn't sleep because of the racket in his basement so he called police, who solved his insomnia problem for him by finding Joe's pet tomcat—caught in a rat-trap.

Yum! Yum!

Evansville, Wis.—Hurrying down to the front of the house in the middle of the night, with a shotgun in hand, looking for a burglar, Al Dunphy found the cause of all the strange noises he heard was a billy goat, calmly munching a window curtain.

He Remembers.

Seattle—Ralph R. Knapp, a lawyer and former speaker of the State House of Representatives, has been married 22 years and has never forgotten his wife's birthday. It happens to be his own, too.

A Record Gulp.

Alton, Ill.—Gladys Saville, 18, probably set a record when she gulped down four safety pins in one swallow. All of them unfastened, too. She was sewing and holding the pins in her mouth, when she accidently swallowed them. Doctors believed an operation would be unnecessary. Three of the pins have passed into digestive organs and she has suffered no pain.

Conversation

I conceive that speaking generally, conversation ought to consist more frequently of ordinary and gallant things, than of great things, but I also think that there is nothing that may not enter it, and it ought to be free and diversified according to the time and place and persons about us; I think that the secret is to speak nobly of low things, simply of high things, and very courteously of courteous things, without too much forwardness and without affection.—Mademoiselle de Scudery.

Dangerous "Animal"

A first-grade teacher was telling the children about different wild animals and in order to test the knowledge they had gained she asked:

"Now, who can tell me the name of an animal that has horns and is very dangerous for us to get near?"

Before she could call on any particular one, little Bobby piped out enthusiastically:

"I know, Miss —; it's a truck!"

Water From Air

By a new method drinking water is collected from the air in southern France. A large, round pillar with a thick outer casing of cement is erected. The water is produced by the difference between day and night temperature forcing the air down pipes in the pillar, where it condenses and falls into a reservoir.

Primitive "Steamship"

The Savannah, an American-built vessel of 350 tons, crossed the ocean from Savannah to Liverpool in twenty-five days, but the engines were only used as auxiliary power. When the wind was fair or the sea was too rough for steaming the paddle wheels were unrigged and taken on deck. The engines were only used a total of 80 hours during the voyage.

This Tree Grows Fast

A eucalyptus may produce in 20 years as much wood as an oak in a century, says Nature Magazine. The blue gum, Eucalyptus globulus, has been known to reach a height of 25 feet in 18 months after seeding and 65 feet within six years. If the young trunk is cut down, it at once sends up half a dozen new trees from the pollarded stump.

We regret to announce that the Wheatridge Christmas Seals for Kingston will not be sent out to the members this week. It seems that the quota of seals for the Immanuel Young People's Society were mailed to us but as they have not been received we believe that they were lost in transit. We trust that we shall be in a position to mail out the seals in the very near future.

The cast of characters for the play, "Little Mother Baker," to be given by the Immanuel Young People's Society has been selected and rehearsals will begin in the near future. This play was written by G. L. Wind and promises to be very interesting as well as entertaining.

The next meeting of the Young People's Society will feature a "Question Box" as the educational part of the meeting. The questions will be answered by Pastor Witte and each and every member of the society is requested to be present. The committee in charge of the refreshments for the December meeting are also planning on a Christmas party so that the December meeting should be very interesting.

Matter of Placing

Juxtaposition means "a placing close together, either side by side or in apposition." Contraposition means "a placing opposite."

War Memorial Plans Progress

Although the Rosendale Memorial and Honor Roll was dedicated on Sunday, November 27, this does not mean that the work on it has been completed.

The object of the committee was the erection during Bicentennial year. The plans call for a cobblestone wall around the plot which will necessitate a fill of about four feet and the erection of a flag pole after which the plot will be seeded.

As the plan to place names of subscribers behind the Honor Roll was found impractical, it was decided to place these names in the cornerstone of the wall.

This will be laid, if weather permits, not later than two weeks from the present time. Those who have not already subscribed are invited to do so before that time, so that their names will also be included.

The committee wishes to thank all those, who by their presence on Sunday, helped make the event one to be remembered, including the following who paraded: American Legion and American Legion Drum Corps, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Junior Order of United American Mechanics Band, school children of town, Bloomington Athletic Club, 4-H Club of Binnewater, 4-H Fife and Drum Corps of Rifton, Gold Star Mothers, All Veterans, John J. Birmingham, the last Civil War veteran in the town, and the Town and Village Boards.

THE DEADLY DOLE

The prospect is that this winter, in the darkness before the dawn, the foreign "dole" system so much dreaded in America will gain a considerable foothold. Everything points to greater need of relief than ever. Not that the basic business conditions are getting worse; from all trustworthy evidence we are really on our way out of the depression. But millions of unemployed families have used up their reserves, and will have to be helped. Whatever we may call it, we are having a public "dole" in many cities, and we may yet have it in many states. We may even have a federal dole. Yet this is surely as unnecessary as it is unwise. Not the relief, but the dispensing of relief to men and women who are able to work for what they get, and would far rather earn it than accept it as charity.

Many American cities are taking the intelligent method of providing useful work for those supported from public funds. Detroit, where the unemployment is especially severe, is an excellent example. Representatives of 10,000 families are now earning every cent they receive for the basic necessaries of life. They are paid not in money, but in food, fuel, clothing and shelter. As a result of their labor, the city is cleaner and better managed than usual, and valuable constructive work of many kinds is being done. Many things need to be done in every community. To give an indiscriminate dole is to throw away money, destroy self-respect, encourage idleness and miss an opportunity. The distribution of useful public work at this time, as a substitute for charity, is a test of civic intelligence.

SLOVENLY SPEECH

The National Council of Teachers of English, representing several thousand teachers and instructors in American schools and colleges, relaxes English rules and approves a couple of hundred questionable expressions as "good colloquial usage". Among them are these: "I felt badly". "Who are you looking for?" "Try and get well". "Healthy climate". "I wish I was there". "It's me". "None are expected". "Awfully bad". "Walk slow".

A columnist with a thorough knowledge of grammar and literature is somewhat puzzled by the list. The last three examples, he points out, have never been really wrong, in spite of shallow rules to the contrary set up by critics who didn't know their language. Some of the others quoted, no doubt, are permissible enough in conversation, though an educated person would hardly be expected to use them in writing. But even conversationally, some of them sound pretty bad. "I wish I was there", for instance. Unfortunately the subjunctive seems to be vanishing from the living language.

Such concessions to slovenly speech, on the whole, are a surrender to a popular breaking down of the language by a medley of races ignorant of genuine English and its traditions. Efforts to preserve the purity of English, though possibly hopeless, are still worth while.

LET THE EXPERTS DO IT.

A newspaper man tells a true story which might have happened to any of us. A friend drove him to town one morning and, as they rode along, "sketched desirable changes in the banking laws, revised the tariff, outlined a method of collecting the war debts and solved the question of unemployment." He had just launched into an analysis of bimetallism when the engine passed out. The motorist knew only that he had gas. Without even looking under the hood he telephoned for a garage mechanic to come and set things right. A motor was beyond him, but not the intricate affairs of the modern world.

Are two or three ever gathered together anywhere these days that all the national and international problems of the times are not settled again and again, not always in the same ways, but always vehemently and positively? We are all busy doing it.

The implication of the story is that the man who could not repair his own car was equally ineffective in the more important world repair plans he had outlined so glibly. He knew enough to leave his car engine to an expert, but he did not trust the experts in banking, tariff, war debts, and all the rest. It must be admitted the so-called experts seem baffled. Yet it may be that they would do better if they were not assailed by so much inexpert advice, political pressure and nationalistic prejudice. Wouldn't it be great if we could somehow turn the whole mess over to the right persons or parties and leave the job to them?

THREE TYPES OF GOITRE.

It is but natural, should any member of your family have an enlargement of the thyroid gland, goitre as it is called, that you would be somewhat anxious about it.

Fortunately the majority of the cases of enlarged thyroid gland are of the simple type and should cause no alarm.

Investigators tell us that there are three types, and it was noted that in regions where goitre is common, the average weight of the thyroid gland was more than three times as much as in regions where the disease was rare.

The first type or group includes those with just simple enlargement of the thyroid gland. The structure of the gland is perfectly normal in every way; simply an increase in the size of the gland, and naturally it is able to do more work.

The second group showed a nodular—lump like—enlargement which appears to develop from the normal cells present in the thyroid gland.

In the third group, in addition to an increase in the normal cells of the thyroid gland, there are distinct changes in the tissue. This third group is what is called exopthaimic goitre which is the serious type of goitre. In this type we find the bulging eyes, the rapid heart beat, extreme nervousness, and loss of weight.

The first group—simple enlargement of the gland—is Nature's method of creating more cell tissue to supply the demands for iodine in the body. It is not considered a disease at all.

The second group, with the lumps in addition to an increase in cell tissue, may never give any trouble.

It is the third group, and this third group may develop from either of the other two groups that calls for medical, surgical, or X ray treatment.

So if there is any sign of an enlarged thyroid gland, consult your family doctor, and he, by various tests, will be able to tell you the group to which it belongs. Even in the serious type, rest, simply lying down a number of hours daily in addition to the usual night's rest has cured many cases.

Sword Duels Between Sexes

Dagger and sword duels between women and even between women and men occurred frequently in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries in France, Italy and Spain. One French actress, who dueled at the slightest provocation, challenged and killed three men in one evening.—Collier's Weekly.

A PATH TO PARADISE

by Carnegie DAWSON

Clive Randall, whose weak character plunges again into the background, this time by his wife Santa's unshakable desire to reform her former weakness, Dicky Scott, is so blind that Dicky persuades her he really is producing plays on Broadway with the name of Lou-Lou, longtime friend of Dicky's, comes into the story. Then she understands; then also, Clive sees a possible ally in Lou-Lou.

Chapter 42

STAGE DOOR JOHNNY

CLIVE was lacking in finesse. He had never had underhand dealings with women. To get in touch with Lou-Lou he chose the course that was most direct. Having waited till his wife and Dicky were settled for the evening, he slipped into his coat and hat.

Hearing movements, Santa called, "What are you doing, darling?"

"Appointment with a friend."

That brought her into the hall on the run.

"What sort of a friend?"

"Sort of business friend."

"That's a fib. You can't lie like the truth. Besides—"

He glanced back in the act of escaping.

"Besides what?"

"You mustn't leave me alone with Dicky."

"Santa, you're a fraud. Being alone with Dicky ought to be second nature."

As he bent his steps toward the glare of Broadway, he thought furiously. This Dicky business was becoming more serious than he'd anticipated. More serious than even Santa imagined.

The rendezvous that he was planning was a strategy of desperation. He set himself a problem in arithmetic: if his marriage had taken nine months to degenerate to this muddle, how many more months would it require to bust up completely?

Having reached the theater where Lou-Lou disported, he bought an orchestra seat and handed a note to the clerk in the office.

"Please have it delivered."

The note read:

My dear Miss Lou-Lou, excuse my familiarity—it's the only name by which I know you. If you can spare me a few moments, I shall be most grateful. My business is urgent. It concerns a friend of yours—Richard Dak.

He had written it over as many times as a school-boy, his object being to spur curiosity and at the same time to prevent her from mistaking him for a stage-struck Johnny.

He felt furtive, almost wicked—a young man on the loose. He was doing no worse than Santa. Nevertheless, as he sank in his seat, he was thankful for the darkness.

During the intermission an attendant tapped him on the shoulder.

"At the end of the performance Miss Sandrelle will see you in her dressing-room."

He picked up a program and read Lou-Lou Sandrelle on the list of actresses. Sandrelle was as good a name as any if you had been christened Smith or Jones.

Miserably selfconscious, at the final lowering of the curtain he wandered into the foyer. Everyone respectable was departing.

"I have an appointment with Miss Sandrelle," he muttered, and was directed to the stage entrance.

Thence he was handed on through scenery in process of being dismantled, till he found himself outside a door in a gloomy passage. With a sinking heart he tapped.

"Come in, O it's you!"

She grinned like a street-urchin, only partially clad and totally unembarrassed.

"I troubled you, Miss Sandrelle—"

"If you're a friend of Dicky's," she cut him short, "you're a friend of mine. What about him?"

Perching on a stool before the mirror, she began to powder her arms and throat. That done, she reddened her lips and dabbed her ears with perfume. Clive had never been treated to sights so intimate by any woman except Santa.

"You're a nice boy." She spoke again, attempting to put him at his ease. "I've a date with a beau. That's the reason I'm squeezing you into my only spare moment."

"Is your date with Dicky?"

"And if it is?" She glanced across her gleaming shoulder.

"He won't keep it." Clive sank his head. "We're companions in misfortune—adrift in the same boat. I hate to tell you. He's with my wife, and there he'll stay till I return to break up the party."

"The big, soft lump!" was her only comment.

...ssed his eyes coyly. She was lovely, collected, entirely undaunted. With slackened speed she was brushing her fair hair, which Santa had declared was tinted.

"I'm wondering," he faltered, "why he couldn't be content with you?"

"I'm not his class, dearie." She smiled at her reflection. "You ought to paste him one on the nose, or, better still, go home and beat up your wife."

"Out of the question."

She turned in surprise, tapping her knee impatiently with her brush.

"Can't beat up your wife! Who's a better right? What's to prevent you?"

"A thousand reasons."

"It's not done in your set, I suppose?"

"That's one of them. But there are heaps of others. I love her and there's nothing she wouldn't do for me. She'd stake me with her last dollar."

"Then why's she messing about with my beau?"

Clive's gaze fell.

"She was married to him."

Dead silence.

Lou-Lou slipped off her stool and stole toward him.

"You poor guy! You're the one she gypped to marry Dicky—the one who was always crazy over her. You see, Dicky's told me." She rested her hand on his shoulder.

"I know all about you, too." Clive stared up at her. "Santa's told me. I guess we haven't much to learn about each other."

"Let's compare notes," she suggested.

"He put you in this show," Clive mumbled, "and he makes you an allowance."

She nodded.

"I'm the same as you are with her; he's my baby. I'm crazy over him. He's never treated me right. He couldn't treat any woman right. When he sees a bit of fluff he thinks he likes better, he appeals to my chivalry to let him go. He appealed to my chivalry to clear out when he got married.

"He's a great one for appealing to women's chivalry. I'll bet that's how he's got round your cutie a second time. As far as I'm concerned, I don't really mind; he comes whimpering back when he's been hurt, like a grubby little boy—can't do without me. And I, like a sap, fall for him."

Clive struggled to his feet.

"You're fine. The little I know about women I've picked up from my wife."

She laughed good-naturedly and returned to her dressing.

"If you've ever borrowed any of her polo-coats, you must have picked up a mouthful."

Adjusting a chic hat, as she tugged it down across her forehead, she questioned:

"Want me to whistle Dicky off? Is that it?"

"If you don't want to lose him."

"Ever try to lose a cat?" She flung at him her urchin smile.

Having arranged her furs, she turned.

"How do I look?"

"Stunning."

"Slim and sumptuous," she added to his praise. "I'll say I do!"

With a comradeship that was startling, she poked her arm through his.

"Take me somewhere. I'm hungry."

Leaving the deserted theater, they plunged into Broadway. Not wishing to make themselves conspicuous, they entered a Childs. Across a marble-topped table she pinned him.

"You have a plan."

"I have, but I hadn't." He lowered his voice. "What you said about Dicky's trick of appealing to women's chivalry is true. My wife thinks she's making a new man of him. If she were to find out for a fact that he's—"

"My very best beau." Lou-Lou stirred her coffee.

Clive nodded.

"Fur would fly. She'd kick him out."

"Kick him back to me." Lou-Lou laughed gaily. "I get your idea."

They spoke in whispers, hatching their plot.

"We'll have to make it realistic," she warned him, "you mustn't mind if I insult you, too."

His last word at parting was, "I'll telephone you at the theater when the hour is ripe."

Sent in as a substitute on the University of Georgia football team, in the game against Ogelthorpe in 1930, Norman "Buster" Mott at half received the ball on the first play and ran 52 yards to a touchdown. A few minutes later he intercepted a pass and ran 60 yards for his second touchdown. He had handled the ball only twice, and had scored two touchdowns. It was his first college football game.

The U. C. Government has many strange patents in its files, but among the strangest is the mirror fish-bait. The inventor, in his application, reasons that the male fish, on approaching the mirror, will see what he thinks is another fish about to take the bait. He will increase his speed and take the bait immediately. In case the particular fish being sought are cowards, a curved mirror will be used—making the image small enough to encourage the prospective catch.

Concerning the female fish, the inventor said, "In the case of a female fish the attractiveness of a mirror is too well known to need discussion."

An Apple a Day

New York State's apple crop this year is estimated at 20,000,000 bushels. Thousands of bushels will rot because of a lack of sufficient consumer demand. Take advantage of the situation—use the apple recipes which will appear in each issue of this paper—cut them out for future reference.

SCALLOPED APPLES

1 quart sliced apples
¼ cup butter
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon grated nutmeg
½ lemon, grated rind and juice
2 cups bread crumbs

Melt butter and stir into crumbs slightly with fork. Cover bottom of buttered baking dish with crumbs and spread over ½ of apples. Sprinkle with ½ of the sugar, nutmeg and lemon juice and rind mixed together. Repeat, cover with remaining crumbs and bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven. Cover at first to prevent crumbs browning too rapidly. Serve with cream.

These recipes are compiled by the experts of the New York State College of Home Economics, at Cornell University, Ithaca, and others, and are made available through Consumers Information Service of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Hadassah Chapter Opens Campaign

The Kingston chapter of Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America, has begun the most intensive membership campaign in its history as part of a countrywide drive to increase the national Hadassah membership to 40,000. The campaign will be culminated during a final whirlwind week, from December 3 to 8, with a community rally and "victory" luncheon as its outstanding events. Mrs. H. Brown, president of the chapter, has appointed a large membership committee with Mrs. O. London as chairman and Miss Sadie Jacobson as secretary. The committee is divided into teams, a captain at the head of each.

The women of the Jewish community have been aroused to unusual enthusiasm in this drive, according to Mrs. Brown. With the slogan, "Every Jewish Woman Has a place in Hadassah", the teams of campaign workers are penetrating every section of the city in soliciting new members. Informal parlor meetings, teas and card parties are being frequently held, being given frequently for new members. The next meeting of the local chapter will be held Monday, December 12, at the Jewish Community Center. Following the meeting, bridge will be played. A large attendance is expected. Religion, Practical Or Theoretical Told ——— informed me that he could not offer the prayer without reference to the Son and Holy Spirit, and so must decline my invitation. I explained to him that I did not mean to imply that the Trinitarian conception of Deity was less true than the Unitarian. I considered both to be human attempts to designate a Supreme Being whose essence must always transcend human formulation. But he did not offer the prayer.

The question whether one ought to describe light as consisting of colorless illumination or of the seven colors of the spectrum is a theoretical one which may have the greatest importance to the philosopher; but to the physician or social welfare worker it is of far greater importance that nothing prevents the light from reaching us, whatever its proper definition or designation. It appears to me that had Rev. ——'s religion been more practical and less theoretical, he would have been able to invoke the Divine guidance at my services without infidelity to his creed and without affront to my people's.

Bitter Conflict.

The second half of the 19th century witnessed a bitter conflict between the advocates of science and those of religion. The very premises of religion were under attack: Did God exist? Could not reality be expressed and understood in purely materialistic terms? All of these attacks directed at the validity of religious thinking have failed. Whether on ontological or logical grounds, whether on grounds of historical criticism or social theory, those who battled against the verity of religious premises, have not been able to score. In our century militant atheism is an anachronism, an intellectual avatism, like theosophy and spiritualism, which also have their adherents among putatively educated persons. Today as Dean Inge has said, "Alike in religion and philosophy the important question is not whether God exists, but what we mean when we speak of God."

I would like to point out that this Nineteenth Century "Kulturkampf," this so called war between science and religion was entirely of a theoretical nature. The attack against religion was theoretical, the religious defense was theoretical. Even Dean Inge's statement, possibly only after the 19th century conflict had been brought to a successful close, reveals a theoretical bias: "The important question is...what we mean when we speak of God." This statement is wholly convincing to the theorist, but to the practical religionist the important question is, how is our belief in God affecting our lives? How is our thinking about God translated into behaviour?

Religion still has its open opponents, and still has its apologists. The 20th Century, however, has seen a shift in the basis of conflict from ontological to psychological grounds. William James is perhaps best known for his psychological defense of religion. Typical, perhaps, among contemporary apologists for Christianity in the liberal camp is Harry Emerson Fosdick, whom I now quote: "Religion is increasingly dealt with today not in ecclesiastical or theological, but in psychological terms. Increasing numbers of people mean by religion, not first of all a true church or an orthodox system of theology, but a psychological experience." Yet, Dr. Fosdick, with his constant argumentation and redefinition of religion, is obviously himself a theorist. An atmosphere of super-intellectualism, surrounds his ministry. It is difficult to distinguish between the kind of psychological experience which might result from following his teachings, and that which might well follow a course in philosophy.

The contemporary danger to religion, it appears to me, is not in opposition, calling for philosophical apologetics, but in indifference! My colleagues in the Jewish ministry give me this report, and to judge from statements frequently made by Christian ministers, the church as well as the synagogue faces the same problem. We shall not serve our cause well by merely decrying this growing indifference to institutionalized religion; we ought to study its cause, and seek a remedy.

The reason has often been advanced by the religiously indifferent in self-justification, that he sees no superiority in religious over non-religious people. Of course what he means is that he sees no superiority in church-members over non-church-members. The minister of religion today can not defend his faith by engaging in learned polemic or zealous apologetic. The layman is judging us by our fruits, and it is by our fruits only that we may hope to win to our cause the majority of our people. I believe we should attempt this by transferring the emphasis from Religious Theory to Religious Practice, from mere doctrinal affirmation to a living, creative influence.

I would not seem to undervalue the theoretical side of religion. I can imagine nothing more distasteful than a soulless, uninspired, mechanical concern for the material welfare of humanity, with no leaven of spiritual teaching. We believe that, in the last analysis, good character is the well-spring of good conduct, and the theoretical religious training we ministers impart builds the virtuous character. Thus even the theoretical side of religion has its practical aspect. True enough, but the indifferent layman does not enter the fold! To his way of thinking, the teacher is as remote from life as his doctrine! How can the pupil be warmed, he asks, when the teacher is cold?

As a matter of fact, in what can we ministers of religion boast ourselves superior to the laymen, and in many cases even to the non-religious laymen? Eleven million men are unemployed today, they and their families suffer cruel want of bare necessities of life. Are we doing more about this wrong which cries out to heaven than the laymen? Or even as much? It is true that without the benefit of religious influence, the laymen would probably not be moved to compassion and assistance; but is it possible for the pupils to be moved to action by teachings when the teachers themselves are not moved?

The League of Nations is a great practical step in the direction of realizing the aspiration of all religions, universal peace; I believe it holds the only promise in sight of the end of such horrible bloodshed and moral chaos as only recently set Christian against Christian and Jew against Jew in violation not only of our high religious teachings, but of simple human decency as well. The League of Nations needs the support, in fact can exist only on the support of favorable and determined public opinion. Are we doing anything about this, as so many splendid laymen are doing?

There are two million boys and girls employed in American industry because of the greed of their employers. We all know that child labor is a black and shameful stain upon our national character, but does our religion impel us to action on behalf of these poor Cosettes of our land? From corruption and basic wrong in our political system, to the starvation of the children of coal-miners, many are the evils which afflict our country, all too often is Justice mocked and Mercy crucified. Practical Religion, the religion of the Jewish prophets, the religion of the Founder of Christianity, cannot condone this through failure to oppose and influence and change. And if Theoretical Religion is indifferent to the appeal of suffering humanity, no wonder that humanity has grown callous to the appeal of theoretical religion.

To overcome the prevalent indifference, then, we should avoid an unhealthy desire for somnolent respectability in our churches. We should strive to make our churches not mere quasi-social clubs where a group of men and women gathers at stated times to sing psalms and pray, and sit, like an examining Board of Regents, in judgment upon the oratorical efforts of the clergy, but vital centers of creative righteousness, whence should issue forth the uplifting, ennobling forces of religion, the healing love, the fearless devotion to causes, the great-souled self-consecration, by which all men might recognize plainly that our churches are not valleys of dry bones, but blessed associations of men and women quickened by the holy spirit, eager to cooperate with the eternal Power that makes for goodness and beauty in our lives, and finding in this labor of love life's chief meaning and joy, a spiritual meaning and the joy of grace.

At The Theatres

Today

Kingston: "Man against Woman." Jack Holt is starred in this vehicle, and supporting him in the cast is Lillian Niles. Several short features complete the program.

Orpheum: "The Last Mile" and "Big City Blues" are the double feature offerings at the Orpheum. Howard Phillips and Preston Foster are among the players in the first talkie, a drama of the death cell in a large prison, with several condemned prisoners supplying the action. The direction in this play is flawless, and its realism makes it worth seeing. "Big City Blues" gives Joan Blondell and Eric Linden another opportunity in a modern story of romance in the metropolis.

Broadway: "Once in a Lifetime." The famous burlesque of Hollywood and the movie folks, that was such a riot on the stage, has been made into a talkie that is as hilarious and rib tickling as any comedy that has come out of the picture studios. All the satire and fun that was poked at Hollywood in the stage version of the play has been left intact, and this show must be classed as excellent comedy, a real four star attraction. The story concerns a dumb and successful motion picture director who makes the wrong picture incidentally, and surrounding him are actors, actresses, movie moguls, etc. All burlesqued beautifully for the enjoyment of the audience. A perfect cast that includes Jack Oakie, Sidney Fox, Aline MacMahon, Louise Fazenda, Russell Hopton, Zazu Pitts, Mona Maris, Gregory Ratoff and Onslow Stevens all contribute outstanding performances. For a good laugh, this is worth while.

Ritz: "Tom Brown of Culver" and "Without Honor". The first feature is a story of the development of youth at one of the country's finest military academies. It is the story of a boy, with a reputation none too good, who absorbs the military training, and becomes a worthwhile citizen. Tom Brown, Richard Cromwell, Slim Summerville, and H. B. Warner are in the cast. "Without Honor" is a melodramatic bit of entertainment featuring Will Terry.

Tomorrow

Kingston: "Scarlet Dawn... A story of the Russian revolution in which one of the aristocratic young blades finds it necessary to move out of the country in a hurry, taking his former serving maid along with him. They marry, and begin seeking existence in a strange land. There are complications in the story before all turns out happily. The Russian nobleman is played effectively by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Nancy Carroll appears on the screen after a long absence in the role of the serving girl. Lilyan Tashman is well cast as a former sweetheart of the Russian nobleman.

Orpheum: "Stepping Sisters" and "Dynamite Ranch". The first is a laugh riot, with Louise Dresser and Minna Gombell. "Dynamite Ranch" is one of the best of the western pictures, starring the handsome Ken Maynard, with Tarzan, the wonder horse. This show is filled with action every minute, and should appeal to all lovers of western stories. Ruth Hall is also in the cast.

Broadway: "American Madness." Four star entertainment, in fact one of the few top notch pictures of the year. It's a story of the depression, the American spirit, and the action covers twenty-four hours in the life of the characters. The scenes of the run on the bank, with the small business men of the little community bringing in their profits to save the bank from disaster is exciting and poignant drama. Walter Huston, as the small town banker with a faith in the people, gives one of his finest and most delightful performances. Pat O'Brien is also at his best, as are Constance Cumings and Kay Johnson. A picture to put on the don't miss list.

Helen Keller at The High School

HELEN KELLER

As she stands alone among women of our land and in the eyes and sympathies of the world, from the plain people up and from statesmen, royalty and high dignitaries down, Helen Keller's appearance in any community is a very outstanding event. She is coming to Kingston High School on the evening of December 13 and already some 40 odd organizations outside the churches have been approached to assist in the big meeting and to act as distributors of invitations to the meeting. Anyone wishing to hear Miss Keller will be able to secure an invitation from the church which they attend or from any organization which they may belong to, the Kingston Federation of Women's Clubs being the sponsor for the eventful meeting.

Organizations are requested not to issue invitations to children under 18 years of age as the meeting is primarily for adults.

In spite of the fact that Miss Keller was deaf, dumb and blind at the age of 19 months, through herculean effort on her part and infinite ability and patient love and sympathy on the part of her lifelong companion and teacher, Anne Sullivan Macy, she has fought down seemingly insurmountable handicaps and overcome the blackness to which she seemed unavoidably doomed. She has been well called "the greatest apostle of achievement." While Helen Keller cannot hear or see, she "will speak" to her Kingston audience, which in and of itself is astounding.

Yet perhaps the greatest feat of all of Miss Keller's accomplishments is her cheerful, determined and sympathetic efforts to help others at all times, but especially those who are blind.

She is now working with the American Foundation for the Blind to help the 100,000 blind people of this country and Miss Keller will tell all about these amazing efforts of experienced educators, vocationalists, legislators, etc., to lift the darkness and despair from these people.

With Mrs. Harry B. Walker, president of the Kingston Federation of Women's Clubs, acting as general chairman, the following Kingstonians have consented to assist in making all necessary arrangements for the evening: Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, Mrs. Charles Terwilliger, Ernest LeFevre, Howard St. John, Mrs. George F. Rice, Miss Frieda Hayes, Mrs. Clara N. Reed, Mrs. A. Noble Graham, Mrs. William M. Mills.

Miss Keller will be accompanied by Anne Sullivan Macy her lifelong friend and teacher, and Miss Polly Thomson, her secretary, on her visit to Kingston.

1—Project Committees

There are three project committees organized for the three chief sources of income on Ulster County farms; namely, Dairy, Poultry and Fruit. All three committees have already met to develop the 1933 program and elect their respective chairmen. C. L. Allen, Kingston, R. D. No. 3, is chairman of the county dairy committee; Charles H. Weidner of West Shokan, chairman of poultry and Peter J. McManus of Milton, chairman of the fruit committee. All three committees have developed a much better program for 1933 than the Farm Bureau has had during previous years.

(c)—General Policies

It is the aim of the Farm Bureau to serve all the farmers of Ulster County in every way possible. Through their committeemen, members arrange for the various educational meetings of interest and value to their community, arrange for the numerous services outlined in the program. The Farm Bureau does not enter any commercial enterprises but is maintained as an educational service organization.

Through a federation of county Farm Bureaus into State and National units, members are represented in State and National affairs. One dollar of the membership fee goes toward the support of both federations.

The Farm Bureau cooperates with other agricultural organizations working for the advancement of agriculture and the welfare of individual farmers. The agents and many officers take a very active part in Grange activities. Programs are provided at numerous meetings during year. The Farm Bureau and the 4-H Clubs.

III—Program of Work

a. How the Program Was Developed

Early in the year it was very evident that the usual type of program, merely a listing of many miscellaneous activities, was not adequate nor effective. After a regional conference of agents and a thorough discussion by the board of directors, it was decided to rewrite the entire program. It was divided into four major divisions. Each portion was to start with an explanation of the situation, followed by an outline of the problems at hand, and conclude by a statement of what the Farm Bureau will do to assist in the solution of the problems. Many of the numerous miscellaneous activities will not be mentioned in the program but will be carried on as requests are received from members.

b. Program of Work for 1932

The following is the complete program for 1932 as revised and approved by the board of directors in August:

Ulster County Farm Bureau
Program for 1932
Dec. 1, 1931, to Dec. 1, 1932

Organization

The Farm Bureau is the educational organization in Ulster County authorized by the county law to serve and improve agriculture. As agriculture is a fundamental industry the prosperity of farmers is essential for prosperity in all villages and cities. A nation cannot long prosper with a decadent agriculture.

Through a system of community committees, project committees, and a board of directors, elected by the membership, the farm leadership of the county is organized for self help. They determine the policies of the Farm Bureau, develop the program of work and provide adequate finances for the promotion of the program. They maintain an interested and investing membership by organizing a carrying out of a membership drive each year.

The Farm Bureau must be prepared to meet any emergencies that may arise, such as insect and disease control, marketing situations and individual requests for services. In addition, a headquarters for all agricultural interests of the county is maintained at the Farm Bureau office. It is always ready to co-operate with the Grange and all other agricultural organization and render assistance wherever possible.

The Farm Bureau manager is also the County Agricultural Agent and as such is the representative of the State College and the U. S. Department of Agriculture in the county. Thus, there is close cooperation with these agencies for agricultural improvement.

In 1932 the organization activities will be as follows:

1—Hold at least twelve meetings of the board of directors.

2—Hold at least one committee meeting in each of the eighteen organized communities.

3—Hold project committee meetings to study and determine the fruit, poultry and dairy programs.

4—Organize and conduct the annual drive for members.

5—Prepare and send out twelve issues of the Farm and Home Bureau News to all members.

6—By affiliation with the State and American Farm Bureau Federations, individual members are represented in the state and national affairs.

Poultry.

Ulster county has the fourth largest number of hens of all counties in the state and stands first in the value of poultry products sold. The value of eggs produced and chickens sold in 1929 amounted to $2,117,000. Poultrykeeping is second of the three major sources of income on Ulster county farms.

1—The essential problems facing Ulster county poultrymen are:

1—The handling, grading and marketing of eggs.

2—Increasing the production of eggs per bird.

3—Reduction of mortality of both chicks and mature birds.

II—The Farm Bureau plans to help poultrymen solve these problems as follows:

1—Make a careful study of egg marketing and determine the demands of the market as to egg quality and present these facts at meetings during the year.

2—Discuss the various phases of poultry mangement, also disease and parasite control, at a three-day poultry school and other meetings.

3—Organize the paid culling project for all poultrymen.

4—Arrange to distribuate fowl pox vaccine to poultrymen through the State Veterinary College and local veterinarians.

5—Be prepared to discuss individual poultry problems with poultrymen on request.

6—Cooperate in staging the second annual S. E. N. Y. baby chick show at Liberty.

7—Encourage poultrymen to buy well-bred disease free chicks from local sources.

8—Send out the "Nest Egg," a timely service letter for poultrymen, on request.

Dairy.

Dairying is first of the three major sources of income on Ulster county farms. In 1929 over 9,000,000 gallons of milk were produced, valued at $1,898,000. The drastic reduction in the price has made it impossible for dairymen to make ends meet. The prices of feed and some commodities farmers buy, have been reduced but fixed charges such as taxes, interest and machinery, remain high.

This situation calls for an emergency program in both marketing and production. The plan devised by the State Emergency Committee will give every dairyman an opportunity to vote whether he is in favor of one marketing agency for milk to stabilize the market.

1—The major problems in milk production for 1932 are:

1. More advantageous marketing.
2. How to get dividends from the cash investments in dairy rations.
3. How to reduce cash expenditures.
4. To eliminate disease, especially bovine tuberculosis, from the herd.
5. To improve the average quality of bulls on dairy farms.
6. To increase the production per cow of both milk and butterfat.

II—To meet these problems in Ulster county, the Farm Bureau plans the following activities:

2. Present the available marketing facts on request to groups and individuals and give assistance on problems of milk quality.

2. Promote the dairy record service among all dairymen. The only way to feed dairy cattle economically is to know how much milk and butterfat each cow produces and feed accordingly. Production records enable the dairymen to cull low producing, unprofitable cows, thereby raising the production per cow. They also tell him which cow to raise calves from.

3. Continue the two branches of the Dairy Improvement Association and encourage more dairymen to become members: Form a third branch if sufficient dairymen are interested.

a. Hold an annual meeting of the entire association membership to discuss finances and policies.

b. Keep in close touch with the testers and check on their work occasionally.

c. Visit dairymen interested in this service.

d. Publish the complete association reports in the Farm and Home Bureau News each month.

4. Encourage dairymen to join the regional Dairy Record Club and visit those interested in this type of record service.

5. Prepare News articles in the production of small grains, better roughage and silage.

6. Cooperate with the Accredited Herd Association in eradicating bovine tuberculosis and give out information on request.

7. Publish facts in regard to bang abortion and mastitis.

8. Cooperate with the Ulster County Holstein Club and other breed clubs.

9. Take a bull survey in five townships and encourage all dairymen to keep better bulls. Hold a two-day breeders school.

10. Organize a Pasture Improvement campaign for the county.

11. Assist in locating tuberculin tested cows for those desiring same.

12. Send out the "Full Milk Pail" to those requesting this timely service letter and discuss individual problems with dairymen on request.

Fruit

Fruit growing is the third major source of income on Ulster County farms. We rank sixth among the counties of the state and the value of fruit amounted to $1,625,000, in 1929.

1—The major problems confronting Ulster county fruit growers are:

1. Increasing the percentage of high grade fruit available for the market.

2. Reduce the cost of raising all kinds of fruit.

2—The Farm Bureau will help fruit growers meet these problems as follows:

1. Organize the Spray Information Service for fifty paid cooperators and send the spray letters to all Farm Bureau members. Encourage all fruit growers to save money by thoroughly spraying at the proper time. Frequent letters will be mailed for timing the spray applications as well as explaining the preparation of spray materials and which materials to use.

2—Hold a series of twilight meetings in the various fruit growing communities to give instructions in the identification and control of the various insects and diseases.

3—Hold a series of winter meetings to discuss various phases of fruit growing.

4—Hold pruning demonstrations in six communities and encourage systematic pruning.

5—Conduct a fruit tour during August and visit the spraying demonstrations and experimental plots.

6—Encourage fruit growers to provide bees for pollination purposes.

7—Answer all individual requests for information on fruit problems and keep a supply of fruit bulletins on hand for free distribution.

Miscellaneous Activities

The remaining important projects include vegetable gardening, soil testing for lime requirement, drainage service and the numerous others will be continued but will not be stressed in the program. Members desiring any service or information not listed, will be cared for exactly the same as usual. Requests should be made at the Farm Bureau Office, 74 John street, Kingston, N. Y., through the Manager and Assistant Manager or one of the committeemen.

(c)—Project Activities and Results

Although the program has been limited to four major activities, the suggested outline in the statistical report folder will be followed in enumerating the various activities and results during the past year.

1—Cereals

The volume of cereal crops is very small. According to the 1930 census there are no grain farms in the county. Some grain, particularly wheat and oats are grown for threshing, but often are used as a nurse crop and cut green for hay or immediate consumption. A number of requests regarding rates of seeding and seed bed preparation were answered. Fourteen farm visits were made.

2—Legumes and Forage Crops

Practically all legume work consisted of taking soil samples. Eighty-nine farm visits were made. In all cases either soil samples were taken or problems in regard to seeding were discussed. The work was principally with alfalfa and sweet clover. Several inquiries were also answered in regard to pasture improvement and silage corn varieties.

The service letter known as the "Alfalfa Clover service" was mailed regularly to one hundred and forty-nine members. These were prepared by the College and contained timely hints on growing alfalfa and clover.

Inoculation for most legumes was distributed in cooperation with the State College but this service has now been discontinued as commercial agencies are now handling the material.

3—Other Crops

A number of requests were answered regarding seed potato treatment, potato cultural practices and potato spraying.

4—Home Gardens

Due to economic re-adjustment there was considerable interest in home and community gardens. A number of visits were made, mostly in the city. The agent cooperated with one company which donated the use of a tract of land to fifteen families, employes of the concern, for the growing of potatoes and vegetables. Seed bed preparation, seeding, management and spraying were discussed.

5—Market Gardening

Early in February four vegetable meetings were held. The first at Stone Ridge in cooperation with the Grange, with Prof. Underwood as the speaker; two were held at Marlborough with Dr. Chupp and Prof. Underwood in charge and the last was held at Kingston. All were well attended.

A number of visits were made in answer to requests on varieties, cultural practices, insect and disease control. Two days were spent making a survey of cultural practices on large vegetable farms to be used as a basis of future work. Considerable damage resulted from the Mexican Bean Beetle infestation and Stewart's Disease in early sweet corn.

As a result of the Japanese Beetle quarantine numerous growers experienced trouble shipping plants and vegetables out of the area. Arrangements were made to get permits locally for those who wanted to transport the articles under quarantine.

The "Vegetable Service" letter was mailed regularly to one hundred and fifty growers who requested same.

6—Fruits

W. J. Clark, assistant manager of the Farm Bureau, had full control of the spray information service, which took his full time from April 1, 1932 to October 15. This service consisted of a complete series of timely spray warnings, a trouble hour each morning from 7:00 to 8:00 o'clock at Highland, twilight meetings in the various fruit growing communities, spraying demonstration and a fruit tour. This special service was made possible by the cooperation of fifty-eight large fruit growers, who paid $15.00 plus their annual membership dues, for the periodic visits and the services of the assistant. The spray warnings were sent to all Farm Bureau members and visits were made on request.

Five very successful pruning demonstrations, eighteen twilight meetings in nine different communities, two top working and bridge grafting demonstrations and seven winter fruit meetings were held in the various fruit growing communities. The specialists who took part in the various meetings were: Dr. P. J. Chapman, Paul Williamson, Prof. L. C. Anderson, Dr. W. D. Mills, W. E. Blauvelt, and Prof. G. W. Peck. The average attendance of the seven winter meetings was forty-six.

In August the county fruit tour was held. It included visits to various experimental and demonstration blocs. Over one hundred were in attendance. Prof J. T. Breggar was the guest speaker after lunch at the noon-day stop.

Over sixteen hundred farm visits were made regarding the fruit work on a total of five hundred and twelve different farms. The spray warnings were sent regularly to five hundred and eighty-seven fruit growers.

The assistant agent attended the three day winter meeting of the State Horticultural Society, the summer meeting at the Experiment Station in Geneva and the Spray Service School at the College to become familiar with the latest information regarding fruit growing in order to conduct the best possible spray information service.

Considerable time was spent in planning, collecting fruit for and arranging the county fruit exhibit at the State Fair. Third prize was awarded the exhibit. It brought considerable publicity to the fruit grown in the county.

Several training meetings were held for 4-H Club members, members of the Future Farmers Club and other boys interested in competing in the judging, as well as insect and disease identification contests to take place at the winter meeting of the Horticultural Society meeting during January in Kingston. Two meetings were attended when plans for this meeting were made.

Several days were spent assisting in the arrangement of stops and escorting various groups touring through the county from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut and Rockland county.

The "Apple Barrel", a service letter containing timely fruit growing information, was mailed to one hundred and fifty-three members on request.

A meeting of the Hudson Valley Fruit committee was held early in March.

7—Forestry.

Very little time was devoted to the subject of forestry. Only one request visit was made and arrangements were made to have an extension specialist make one visit on woodlot management. Several articles were published in the News to encourage reforestation. A half day was spent at one farm laying out a three acre project to prevent erosion and put this marginal land to work.

8—Rodents and Miscellaneous Insects.

A "Rat Campaign" was organized along the lines recommended. Considerable publicity was prepared and letters we mailed to all members. As a result over six hundred orders of bait were ordered and distributed through twenty-three local points in the county. To date, the proposed check-up has not been made.

A large number of requests regarding the control of rodents and numerous insects were received. These were answered by visits, personal letters and phone calls.

Letters were prepared and mailed on woodchuck eradication and mouse control in orchards. Considerable damage resulted in orchards from girdling, during the past winter.

9—Agricultural Engineering.

A new feature on the program was a two-day farm electrification school at Stone Ridge. It consisted of lectures and an extensive equipment display. It was fairly well attended, particularly the dairy session. The program included a talk on rates, a discussion of cost of operation, etc.

Two Farm Machinery schools were held, one at New Paltz and one at Kerhonkson. The attendance was poor, but those present found the discussion of adjusting plows, care and adjustment of binders and other machinery, very interesting and profitable.

Two full days were spent making drainage and water supply visits with Prof. Goodman. Preliminary visits were made to determine the type and importance of each request for this service. Several drainage systems were laid out for construction in the fall.

10—Poultry.

Poultry activities alone took approximately one fifth of the manager's time during the past year. The major activities were: Development of the Mid-Hudson Egg Auction, farm visits on request, distribution of fowl pox vaccine, a three day school, other meetings, development of a 1933 program, paid culling, plus a number of others.

The Mid-Hudson Egg Auction was not a strictly Farm Bureau activity but was first suggested by J. C. Crissy. After four or five tri-county meetings it was definitely planned to organize the auction with the financial backing of the G. L. F. Marketing Corporation. Only the poultrymen from Columbia, Dutchess and Ulster counties are eligible to membership at present. The first auction started on October 18th, and have been very successful. The prices have been fair for the quality of eggs offered. At present there are well over two hundred members of which about one hundred and seventy-five have consigned eggs to at least one auction. The auction not only sets the price for "Hudson Valley Eggs" but is a ready premium market for well-graded quality eggs. Close to one hundred and seventy-five of the auction members are from Ulster county. Numerous meetings were held on grading eggs previous to the first auction and several have been held to discuss the auction since it started.

About seventy-five visits were made on request for assistance to specific problems, mostly disease and parasite troubles. The manager made every effort to keep posted on the latest poultry information, in order to pass it on to the poultrymen. Individual requests of this kind are always encouraged and every effort is made to care for them promptly.

Arrangements were made to secure over 65,000 doses of fowl pox vaccine from the State Veterinary College for distribution to Ulster county poultrymen through local veterinarians. This was over one-third of all the vaccine handled in the state. The results in general were very satisfactory with a small loss as a result of the vaccination process. In most cases the vaccine was supplied free of charge or at a very small cost. It was distributed on an experimental basis to determine the effectiveness of controlling pox by vaccination.

The three day school was planned by a county committee of three. One day was held at New Paltz and two at Stone Ridge. The attendance on two of the days was fair, but on the third day it was poor. Those attending expressed that they were well pleased with the program. An effort was made to discuss all phases of poultry keeping from incubation to management of laying birds.

Other poultry meetings held at the request of local committees were: A county-wide meeting with Dr. C. O. Hall on Breeds and Breeding; two winter meetings with Prof. Hurd; two at Ellenville, one on diseases and the other on chick rearing, and one at Accord on diseases.

The 1933 program was discussed at the local community committees and the county project committee developed the county wide activities. It will be outlined more completely in the summary.

Only about 5,000 birds were handled by the Farm Bureau culler during the past season. Evidently a larger proportion of poultrymen do their own culling, which is the object of all the Farm Bureau teaching.

Ulster county cooperated in the South Eastern New York Chick Show at Liberty last March. Several Ulster county breeders exhibited chicks and the manager attended several planning meetings as well as the show itself. Relatively few poultrymen attended from Ulster county.

The manager cooperated with the members of the State Official Breeders' Association. A county meeting as well as a district meeting was attended. An Ulster county poultryman is a director of the association and Ulster county also has the largest R. O. P. breeder. The manager also attended a number of lectures at Farm and Home Week in Ithaca last February.

Several talks on egg grading and poultry diseases were given at the 4-H Poultry Week-end Camp.

The poultry service letter known as the "Nest Egg" was sent to three hundred and fifteen members requesting same.

Several hundred poultry calendars and bulletins on various poultry subjects were distributed on request. A full line of free bulletins is always maintained at the Farm Bureau office.

II—Dairy:

More time was devoted to dairy activities than any other single enterprise excepting fruit. Cooperating with the Holstein Club, Bovine Tuberculosis eradication, Dairy Organization Committee work, the Dairy Improvement Association and Miscellaneous dairy meetings consumed most of the time.

By far the largest percentage of pure bred cattle in the county are Holsteins and the Holstein Club is the only active breed association. As secretary of this club the manager devoted considerable time to its activities for the improvement of Ulster county cattle. The club participated in the state-wide extension contest in which Ulster county placed near the top; sent a county herd to the State Fair, which won the blue ribbon; held its third annual sale of purebred cattle; held several meetings and a banquet. These activities brought a great deal of publicity to the county and its cattle, and did a great deal to encourage the keeping of better cattle, the object the Farm Bureau is working for.

Through the splendid work of the Ulster County Accredited Herd Association, the county is nearly free from Bovine Tuberculosis. The Farm Bureau Office keeps the necessary records for this association and does practically all of the necessary clerical work. The manager attended all the meetings of its board of directors as well as the annual meeting. From the standpoint of disease control, this time is very well spent. Hundreds of calls, both personal and telephone are received because of the connection with this work.

Considerable time was taken working in cooperation with the County Dairy Emergency Committee. After the county-wide mass meeting on February 20th, at which the committee was chosen, there was a more or less continuous series of committee meetings, conferences, county meetings, regional, district and state wide meetings; until last of August when the campaign to secure provisional Dairymen's League contracts closed. Farm visits were made, letters prepared and news articles written in connection with the drive. Because of the fact that only about one-third of the required number of contracts were secured, those already signed became void on September 1. To date no definite plan has been developed to continue this effort.

Both branches of the Dairy Improvement Association were continued through the year and reorganized for another association fiscal year on October 1. One tester resigned in January and another in August. This made it necessary to employ two new men and do the necessary checking from time to time. At present there is still time for several new members. The association work is not only of value to the members but to other dairymen. Through the testing work, bulls and cows, of known production and ancestry are available. This is essential to any improvement program.

In December, 1931, a very successful two-day breeders' school was held at New Paltz with Prof. Brownell as instructor. The average attendance was well over sixty and all those present were very much pleased with the work. Many expressed that they learned a great deal about the inheritance of different characteristics in dairy cattle, including milk production and butterfat test.

A dairy banquet was held in March with Dr. Morrison as the guest speaker. Over 100 were in attendance. Three barn meetings were held but the attendance was very poor, partly due to the delay in the arrival of the speaker, caused by a snow storm. Milk quality was discussed at one session of the Electrification School by Dr. Brew of Albany.

Several county meetings of the Dairymen's League, as well as local meetings and the annual meeting were attended by the agent.

A few farm visits were made on pasture improvement and preliminary plans were made to carry on a more complete pasture program.

The county dairy project committee had a meeting and developed a program for 1933, including several new features.

The dairy service letter known as the "Full Milk Pail," was sent out to one hundred and fifty-six members who had requested same. A large number of dairy bulletins were distributed gratis on request.

12. Other Livestock:

Very little time was devoted to livestock work other than cows and poultry. Service letters known as "Sheep Fold" and "Swine Facts" were sent out to members requesting them. A number of bulletins on various livestock subjects were distributed and a few requests in regard to minor problems were received.

13. Farm Management:

An effort was made to have more farmers take an inventory and prepare a credit statement, through news articles and letters. As a result about one hundred and twelve farm inventory books were distributed free of charge.

Three meetings of representatives of the various cooperatives in the county were held to discuss mutual problems. At one the new credit legislation was discussed.

A two-day regional agricultural outlook school for county agents was attended at Poughkeepsie in February. Three specialists from the college outlined in detail the factors affecting various agricultural commodities. This data was in turn used at a number of meetings throughout the county. No effort was made to predict prices but merely to review the status of various factors affecting the market.

In addition to a few farm visits on various farm management problems; the annual meeting of Accord Farmers' Cooperative was attended, also a county-wide meeting of G.L.F. agents and a service letter known as "Farm Management Facts" was mailed to members on request.

14. Marketing:

Considerable work was done along the line of marketing for practically all branches of agriculture in the county. More and more information is becoming available and progress is being made in this direction.

The Mid-Hudson Egg Auction already discussed under the heading of poultry, was the most important development for poultrymen. Through publicity an effort was also made to encourage the consumption of Ulster county eggs.

In milk marketing the work of the dairy organization committee was probably the most important. Although not successful the drive had considerable effect on bringing the need for cooperation to many milk producers.

Starting early in the spring and continuing until fall, a continuous series of news articles were released, calling it to the attention of the public when the various nearby vegetables and fruits were on the market. Various recipes were published and various methods suggested for using local fruits and vegetables. The Home Bureau cooperated in supplying the necessary recipes, etc. This effort was very much appreciated by the growers and many consumers were surprised to know how large the volume of various locally grown products really was. Over one hundred articles were written for this purpose. The various newspapers gave excellent cooperation in this effort.

A total of several days were spent in connection with the Kingston Public Market. Three meetings were held but no progress was made in providing a more suitable place for the market. The market has been conducted on a street for years in an unorganized way. Congestion of traffic is caused and the facilities are inadequate. The producers are very much interested in developing an organized market.

From time to time news articles were prepared on the various crop reports as received from the Department of Agriculture for the information of producers as a guide in marketing.

15. Community activities:

Practically all of the community activities of the Farm Bureau were carried on in cooperation with other organizations and groups such as Granges, High Schools, Parent-Teacher Associations, Men's Clubs, Kiwanis and Rotary. In most cases programs were furnished on one or more occasions. A series of seven very successful meetings were held with Dr. Bates. A total of forty-two Grange metings were attended by the agents. The Farm Bureau agents are always willing and pleased to cooperate with other organizations, in any way possible.

16—Bees

A demonstration apiary was conducted near Milton at the request of fruit growers who were interested in maintaining bees for pollination purposes. A series of four demonstration meetings were held at the apiary. The attendance was rather small, but those present were very much interested. Numerous visits were made and calls answered in regard to bees for pollination. One two-day county-wide meeting of beekeepers was held in Kingston.

17—Program Building

More effort has been put into the development of the county program than ever before, with the result much better and more complete programs have been developed.

A series of eighteen committee meetings were held one each of the eighteen organized communities. At these meetings programs were developed, project leaders were chosen and plans were made for the membership drive. Early in November the project committees of the three major branches of Ulster County Agriculture met and developed the county programs in Dairy, Poultry and Fruit. A number of new projects will be launched which will be of considerable direct value to all farmers and of indirect value to all urban people. A total of 21½ days was spent in program development; including meetings, conferences and farm visits.

18—Organization

Practically all of the important organization work is carried on during the months of October, November and early December. The following outline gives a complete picture of the Fall organization plans:

(a)—Prepare lists of prospective members by communities.

(b)—Prepare a complete plan for approval by the boards of directors.

(c)—Have a county-wide meeting of all community chairmen to discuss the plans and make more detailed plans as to committee meetings, etc.

(d)—Hold a committee meeting in each organized community to develop a local program, discuss the membership drive, choose project leader and plan to attend the regional suppers.

(e)—Hold meeting of the county project committee for Dairy, Poultry and Fruit.

(f)—Mail advance renewal letter to members.

(g)—Mail renewal letter on October 29.

(h)—Hold three regional meetings for all committeemen and their wives as follows:

1. Rondout Valley, November 15.
2. Clintondale, November 16.
3. Kingston, November 17.

(i)—Carry on personal canvass for members from time of regional meeting to the annual meeting.

(j)—Hold annual membership meeting.

(k)—Hold annual banquet.

This outline includes both program making and membership activities and the two are closely tied together. The program for 1933 is complete except for some of the details. A total of 48½ days were spent on organization including directors meetings, local and regional conferences, annual meetings and banquet, editing of the Farm and Home Bureau News, annual extension conference, regional meetings and a number of other minor activities.

The directors held regular meetings each month and three joint meetings were held with the Home Bureau directors. The attendance at all of the meetings was very good. The board is composed of nine members and there were never less than seven present. This indicates the keen interest of the men elected to this office. One regional meeting of directors was held at Poughkeepsie early in October.

The Ulster County Farm Bureau is a member of the State and American Farm Bureau Federations. One dollar of the membership fee goes toward the support of these organizations. A delegate was sent to the State Federation meeting early in November to represent Ulster county. All members receive a tremendous indirect benefit from the activities of the State and American Federations; particularly in tax adjustment and other legislation.

Both agents attended the five-day conference for all extension workers at Ithaca. The program was designed to assist all agents in carrying on the work in their respective counties. The expense of attending this conference is borne by the state.

The Farm and Home Bureau News was prepared and edited each month. It is mailed to all members, the subscription price being included in the membership fee. Every effort is made to make the News worthwhile by publishing articles of interest and value to all members. The reports of the Dairy Improvement Association are published each month. Each member also received the "Bureau Farmer," which is the official publication of the State and American Farm Bureau Federations.

The annual business meeting was held on December 1, 1931, at New Paltz. A new constitution and by-laws was adopted which sets up a Farm and Home Bureau Association of which the Farm Bureau, Home Bureau and 4-H Clubs are departments. The members of the Farm and Home Bureau elect the 4-H Club board of directors. Annual reports, election of directors, resolutions and reports of Federation delegates completed the program.

The annual banquet was held on December 10, with 430 in attendance. The banquet is a strictly social event to celebrate the completion of the membership drive. A turkey dinner is served, followed by a program of entertainment.

The three regional meetings at Kyserike, Clintondale and Lake Katrine were attended by 140 committeemen and their wives. The final material for the membership campaign was presented at these meetings.

A bi-county conference was held in Catskill to discuss organization plans and problems.

19—Other Activities

Some of the other activities of the Farm Bureau and its agents during the past year have been very important such as: Cooperating with the County Agricultural Society in staging a combined exhibit and picnic; cooperation with the Kappa Zeta Club, an organization of rural young men interested in agriculture; cooperation with the Home Bureau and 4-H Clubs; attendance at Farm and Home Week in Ithaca; Cooperation with Future Farmers' Club of the Highland High School and attendance at regional meetings of county agents.

of "Vigilance Signs" to prevent petty thievery, are also of considerable value to individual members making use of such services.

A complete file of agricultural bulletins is maintained at the Farm Bureau Office for free distribution on request. Bulletins on practically all agricultural subjects are kept on hand. Bulletins that are not on hand will be sent for promptly. During the past year a total of nearly 2,000 bulletins of all kinds were distributed.

Individual requests for service by letter, telephone and personal office visits, were more numerous than during previous years. The inquiries related to all kinds of agricultural problems and some were not related to agriculture. They included, insect control and identification, plant disease control, poultry problems, crop production, care of lawns, rodent control, finding of farm help, information of testing for bovine tuberculosis, harvesting fruit, various quarantine regulations, marketing of various products, selection of farms, providing speakers for various occasions, such as Kiwanis and Rotary Club meetings, and many others.

The Farm Bureau serves as an agriculture headquarters for all agriculture interests of the county. The use of the office for this purpose is encouraged.

In several cases investigations were made following applications of the railroad to discontinue the services of agents at several stations. In one case the nearby farmers felt that such action would seriously inconvenience those in the vicinity. Through the Department of Agriculture and Markets at Albany the services of Mr. Dorr were secured to intercede for the producers at two hearings before the Public Service Commission.

The Farm Bureau horseshoe pitching contest stimulated considerable interest in this outdoor sport. The county winner competed in the State Fair Championships in Syracuse.

During the year two radio talks were given over Radio Station WGY on agriculture subjects.

IV—Outlook and Recommendations.

The Farm Bureau and the Extension Service thereby brought to the county, is in a stronger position than it has been since the present agent came to the county. The committeemen realize their responsibility and as a result a better program, to serve the farmers of Ulster county, has been developed, than ever before. The directors, community chairmen, project leaders and the committeemen, all devote considerable time to the betterment of their Farm Bureau and appreciate that it is their own organization, for which they are responsible to the membership.

Present economic conditions may reduce the total number of members for a year or two, but there is no doubt that it will easily be increased, as soon as the farmer is able to make a dollar for his toil.

The developments in the field of marketing, which was probably the weakest point in the Farm Bureau program, have been very striking. The outstanding single feature was the Mid-Hudson Egg Auction already referred to. This alone practically takes care of the marketing needs of Ulster county poultrymen. As sufficient facts become available and farmers themselves take a sufficient interest in the field of marketing, still more progress will be made, particularly in other lines than eggs. It is suggested that the producer himself, should study the marketing problem and work toward a solution. Outside interests will not help materially, in fact many will do all in their power to hinder progress.

(a)—The 1933 Program and its Development.

The program for the coming year, and its development, has already been mentioned several times, therefore only a few of the outstanding features will be reviewed.

The poultry program is probably the most intensive of all. In addition to the local meetings, request visits, etc., it is planned to have regular monthly meetings with some outstanding speaker on the program; put on complete "Grow Better Pullets" campaign, which is open to all poultrymen and conduct a three day "Poultry Exposition" which will include a chick show, egg show, equipment display and an educational program of lectures and demonstrations.

The dairy program will include the usual activities such as the Dairy Improvement Association, cooperation in disease control, cooperation with breed associations and numerous others, plus a better sire program as long time feature for herd improvement, a careful analysis of the marketing situation and a careful consideration of the factors which will lead toward immediate relief on the farm.

A new feature on the fruit program is a plan to study the marketing problem in an effort to determine how the situation might be improved.

The development of the new features is due entirely to the suggestions made and careful consideration given the various problems by the three county project committees representing Dairy, Poultry and Fruit.

V—Summary.

The program developed a year ago has been carried out in detail. Several important activities developed during the year such as the Dairy Emergency Committee work, the Egg Auction, the Agricultural field day, taking a county herd of cattle to the State Fair and others; but they were handled along with the other projects. During the coming year the time will be fairly well occupied with the more intensive program.

Considerable effort was made during the year by both agents to become acquainted with members who have not called upon the Farm Bureau for personal service. As a result a large percentage of the members have been visited by one or the other of the agents. At the request of the directors this effort will be continued, but members should always feel free to call on the Farm Bureau for service at any time.

Accessories With a Seasonal Appeal

New York—Counting the days before Christmas is not altogether a childish pastime. There are those shopping days to figure out—and those pay days. Right now is none too soon to begin making out that Christmas list. It is not hard to do, really, for there are so many detachable parts to a costume today, and almost all of them may be added to your list.

Let's start with collars. They have the most intriguing names, as for instance, the barrister's collar, which is illustrated in the sketch. There are clerical collars, chorister collars, nun's collars—well, go on from there. It's easy enough to recognize and classify them.

Then there are veils. The circular kind are very tricky and dress one up considerably, and the little semi-circular ones are good, too. These are inexpensive gifts—unless one goes in for them by the half or whole dozen and puts them in an attractive case.

Gloves—well, they are worth thinking of, since they may be of anything from warm wool to diaphanous tulle, through velvet and all manner of the most extraordinary glove fabrics. Of course there are kids and suedes too, and mighty good-looking fabric gloves. There are also velvet-trimmed gloves, with a bow on the cuff or a velvet border. Really, you'll be surprised.

And as for flowers—the corsage kind or the boutonniere is best. Flowers are much in favor for evening and make lovely gifts.

Need one mention costume jewelry? It hardly seems necessary, but it may be well to remind you that button earrings are in again, and bangles, and groups of quite wide bracelets—seven for luck, for instance. Also clips and hoop brooches and safety pins for the scarf, and buckles, and even belts themselves.

Vanities sometimes have a zipper fastening and handbags are sometimes swung from the arm instead of carried—that is, the very newest ones are.

Lustrous rayon satin in light colors is the satin which Maggy Rouff has chosen for evening gowns.

THE "BARRISTER" LOSES HIS COLLAR

TWO EARLY MORNING FIRES IN NEW PALTZ THURSDAY

New Paltz, Dec. 3.—Thursday morning, December 1, about four o'clock, the fire alarm was sounded to which the local fire department was soon on the scene of the property of Mrs. Eugene Van Wagenen on Main street. The fire started downstairs in the building in the part of the "Hub Lunch." Little's Bakery is in the other side. The upper flats were occupied by the Little family and the family of Floyd Kniffen. The families were soon out and the greatest damage was done in the lunch room and in the rooms of the Little's. Then again about seven o'clock the second alarm was given, which proved to be a chimney fire in the home of Peter Boland, which was soon checked on the arrival of the firemen.

Canada's Name

The origin of the word "Canada" is uncertain, but it is probably from the Iroquois "kanada," meaning a cabin, or another Indian word, "kanatha," signifying village. The early French explorers picked up the word somewhere, from the Indians, and applied it to an indefinite area which has now come to mean almost the whole northern half of our continent.

Party Clothes Are Both Dignified and Dashing

New York—The whoopee season has arrived and, with it, the usual clamor for clothes in which to step out o' night. Some of us do more of it than others, but even those who get their fun over the radio like to be able to form a mental picture of how the women who are out dining and dancing look. They look just gorgeous—lovelier than ever. The dignified note makes even the girl who was once called a flapper look more intriguing and helps the older woman a lot.

The hairdresses has a good deal to do with it. Curls of all kinds are in and fluffy coiffures are apt to be more generally becoming than severe ones. Women are even wearing ornaments in the hair again—little clips and pins, for instance.

The tiny but very full sleeve has a good deal to do with the new feeling that every one is dressed up. So have flowers a good deal to do with the carnival air.

One of the newest tricks is to dance all wrapped up in a scarf or tiny shawl, in a capelet, or in something that is snug up around the chin—worn over a low cut dress, of course. The dress is cut very low in some instances, for the harness back is still very much worn.

Naturally, wearing gloves helps the general air of formality, and the richness of the season's colors, to say nothing of the elegance of fur, are contributory forces in a picture that certainly gives no indication of being affected by the depression.

While two colors, or black or white with a color, are still worn extensively, there are women who cling with distinction to the all-black or the all-white dress. Ruby and sapphire are both good. So are the purple shades, beginning with light hyacinth tones and ending with royal purple and fuchsia.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

Paris—The Vionnet coats with wide inset bands of satin are not only one of the outstanding coat successes among smart women, but are influencing designers in Paris, and several essays along the theme are appearing in new groups of clothes made for private clients. The ramifications of the idea are numerous, for it is only a step from satin waistbands to satin yokes, sleeves and borders, and to the revival of a general feeling for dull and shiny combinations in one garment.

Schiaparelli's knitted hats are another fashion endorsed by smart young things around Paris. Hand-knitted garments, which of late seasons have concentrated on individually styled blouses and jumpers are now completed by knitted hats and scarfs, and skillfully made toques that are for removed from the staple stocking and beret styles.

Paquin coats are, as usual, lavishly trimmed with fur, particularly fox, making them among the most expensive in Paris. Talking about this, a Paris representative for American stores averred it was evidence that smart women were tired of "dressing poor" and were once more choosing clothes which not only were expensive but looked so. The most expensive evening gown of the Mainbocher collection, the black sheath entirely covered with fringe, has been one of the most successful.

Much of advance midseason gossip concerns itself with the waistline, and feeling is still high among the sponsors of the high and the advocates of the low, respectively. Judging by what one sees worn, each woman can suit herself; the high molded bust continues to be the silhouette for the evening; in the daytime, one sees waistlines—on fashionable women—at nearly every height, with the majority choice at normal or the top of the hips. Probably, on the average, the waistline has dropped a half inch; in many instances, street clothes have shortened about as much; there is very definitely less flare to skirts than last year. One stylist predicts we are returning to pre-depression clothes, wanting nothing to remind us of the unhappy years.

The Inside Story of Sportswear

The inside story of winter sports jackets sets forth in no uncertain terms how very important the choice of linings is for jackets to be worn for ski-ing and general winter wear. Chamois and fur linings are coming much more into the limelight than they were last winter, both for separate jackets and for those that are part of the ski or skating suit. For the woman who wants something a little different from the plain natural chamois, there is a self-color chamois that is a particularly nice novelty. Incidentally, this is also smart as lining for the long tweed coat.

For the Purse-Proud

The low price of petit point and the assembling of colors in the designs gives this type bag a dual character. It is an old favorite which does not lose caste in one season. Excellent models are to be had at nominal cost.

In the higher-priced imports new frames are used which give additional importance to the needle-work design because they are narrow and simple, and usually etched in gold and silver metal combined. This is a refreshing change from the rococo mountings of other seasons.

While many plain velvet bags are shown, those embroidered with small steel beads are an interesting revival which blends with the Victorian fashions. These show an aptitude to harmonize with the afternoon or evening frock.

The wrap at the left was one of several cape-collared models seen in the audience at the opening of the Metropolitan Opera in New York. Made in King's blue velvet, the wrap itself is sleeveless, while a cape collar of ermine is applied. The gloves are especially interesting, since they are in velvet exactly matching the wrap.

Tied-shawl collar and puffed half-sleeves of ermine trimmed a black Lyons velvet worn by another smart spectator. The bolero line achieves a jacket effect for the full-length wrap.

Above, at extreme left, a Patou dress in crepe georgette. It is entirely black, and features a very interesting bodice of incrusted bands, and wide shoulder bands which pass through the first band and tie in a bow.

The next dress, with its classic lines, and tunic effect, is in chalk white crinkly crepe. A pin of two diamond stars is worn in the hair.

The next dress is in black velvet. It features tiny puffed sleeves, and a soft high neckline which ends in a small bow in front, and two side panels of paillettes.

At left, a gray wool dress with cape collar. Shoes and hat match the dress in color and the details of the dress itself include corded seaming in sleeves and skirt, and pique undersleeves and cape.

Creamy beige velvet affords an effective background for a mink cape and muff. The cuffs of the dress are also bordered in mink and the hat carries out the color theme, a velvet turban with "draft" back and a brown feather fancy.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—The stock market showed a tendency to brace itself against further selling in the light early trading today although prices of most stocks were fractionally lower.

H. S. Basketball Squad Is Reduced

Out of some 50 candidates Coach G. Warren Kias cut the Kingston High School basketball squad down to 24 boys who are now practicing in the gym every night under Coach Kias's and Dick Whiston's direction. This number of athletes does not include the football boys who will report Monday for practice. It is expected that six or seven men from the eleven will try their hand at the court game.

Coach Kias did not say as to what he expected in regards to a varsity five. His experienced men are few as they were in football. Outside of Rhymer, Debrosky, Sussin, Noble, DeVeau, Cullum and a few more, the coach has new material with only second team experience and others with no record of play for high school.

So with an outlook rather cloudy, Coach Kias will start working earnestly Monday afternoon in an attempt to whip a team into shape for a practice game which is scheduled against an opponent that has not for Friday evening, December 16, been named. The coach said he had many offers by local teams to fill the bill on that date but as yet he has not accepted any. It all depends whether the team will be in condition to play at that early date.

In any event the first game will be played, if December 16 is not filled, against the Kingston High Alumni on December 23 in the high school gym in the evening. This is one of the annual battles that contains the first real spirit of competition of the season. The Alumni expects to begin practice shortly in order to function more effectively against the varsity.

The boys who are now on the squad not including the football men who will report Monday are: Bahl, Bell, Belchert, Bock, Burns, DeVeau, Dykes, Gillespie, Hotaling, Hanley, Linden, Martin, Maroon, Moore, Neer, Noble, O'Reilly, Rifenbary, Rhymer, Scherer, Smith, Sussin and Zeeh.

Ridgers Win First Game of Season by Defeating Rosendale

The Stone Ridge Big Five opened its basketball season at B. W. S. Hall, High Falls, Friday night by edging out the Rosendale Firemen, 22-20, in a torrid battle that kept Referee Harold "Johnny" Johnson very busy.

To George Barley, Stone Ridge forward, went the honor of winning the game. He caged a field shot in the last few seconds of play breaking a 20-20 deadlock in favor of the Ridgers. Otto Thurin, veteran guard who was a member of the old St. Peter's team, and Joe Koenig, Stone Ridge mainstay, were outstanding in the victory.

The war debt discussion continued to crowd into Wall Street's study of current financial problems, but there was an inclination in some quarters to look elsewhere for light bearing on probable stock market action of the future.

Brokers noted that recent selling had not been particularly heavy, but that, conversely, there had been few evidences of aggressive buying power. Meanwhile, the stock market averages are around the lower limits of their recent trading range. The Associated Press-Standard Statistics index has, for the past ten weeks, etched the following course: from 59.0 on October 7 it declined to 51.0 on October 10; rallied to 58.8 on October 19, dipped to 51.5 on November 3; recovered to 61.0 on November 12 and then receded to 51.4 on December 2.

Consequently, there is considerable interest in current movements: Close students were watching to see if the market would continue to hold at or around its present level.

Weekly Egg Auction Review

During the past week 359 cases of eggs were sold on the Mid-Hudson Egg Auction at Poughkeepsie. The demand was strong, particularly on Friday. The volume of eggs sold has been increasing with a steady increase in the number of buyers.

Well graded, unifor mwhite eggs sold for the following prices in cents per dozen by case lots: Fancy large, 29½ to 42½; grade A large, 27½ to 42; fancy mediums, 31½ to 33½; grade A mediums, 30 to 35½; peewees, 24½ to 27½; large grade A browns, 33 to 29½; fancy medium browns 33 to 34.

The range in prices is due largely to weight of the case within the grade limits, reputation of certain lot numbers, quality of the eggs and the demand. Any producers interested in becoming members of the auction can get in touch with any member of the committee or the Farm Bureau office.

Supervisors Get Less Than in 1914

Considerable comment has followed the announcement Friday that the members of the Board of Supervisors had unanimously agreed to accept a 10 per cent reduction in their annual salary of $350, thus setting the example for other officials to follow.

Few people realize the extent of this 10 per cent reduction which the supervisors will take during 1933. On the face of the matter it appears like a $35 contribution from each supervisor to the county. This sum appears small to many people but few realize that the salary of the supervisors has remained stationary since 1914 when it was changed from the old method of payment by day's pay and mileage to a flat salary of $350 per year. Since that time when the salary was fixed by resolution at $350 a year there has been no increase in pay for the supervisors.

All during the boom times of the war and after the war when all salaries increased very materially the compensation of the supervisor remained the same. Even during the post-war prosperity and high wage period which followed the war there was no increase for the members of the board. Salaries of other county officials were increased in keeping with the trend of the times. Over this period of high prices and high wages the supervisors continued to draw their $350 per year so that while others were profiting by higher scales and higher wages the supervisors continued to work for the same salary as prior to the inflated price period of the war.

A 10 per cent reduction in salary to those who benefited by the period of prosperity and had their wages increased means less than to the members of the board who have been working throughout the prosperous period for pre-war wages. Those who stop to think can realize that the present 10 per cent cut which the supervisors have taken is far more than what it appears on its face and perhaps in reality a much more severe cut than it seems.

Composition of Rainbows

In many rainbows some of the spectrum colors are missing, blue being the color that most frequently drops out. The reason for the variation in the arrangement of colors is that the rainbow is not a simple spectrum but is instead the piling up of a large number of spectra, which have been formed in various complicated ways. It may be said that each rainbow is in reality a number of rainbows thrown together.

Mrs. Elizabeth R. McGeeney Rice, wife of Charles A. Rice, died at the family home, 10 President's Place, Friday evening, after a very brief illness. Mrs. Rice was beloved by a host of friends and relatives, who will be shocked to learn of her early death. Because of her kindly and jovial disposition she made friends easily and retained such friendships. Surviving besides her husband are two sisters, Mrs. Arthur J. Haber of Brooklyn and Estella F. McGeeney of Kingston, and three brothers, James P., William H. and Frank J., all of Brooklyn. Funeral from the late home Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock, thence to St. Mary's Church, where at 10 o'clock a solemn Mass of requiem will be offered for the repose of her soul. Interment in the family plot in St. Mary's Cemetery.

St. Colman's Church, East Kingston, was filled Thursday for the funeral of Patrick J. Hurson, well known citizen of the town of Ulster. Preceding the services at the church, services were held from the late home in East Kingston. A high Mass of requiem was offered at the church by the Rev. Daniel J. Fant. During the Mass Thomas J. Dolan sang, "O, Salutaris," and "Face to Face," and as the casket was borne from the church, Mr. Dolan sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Interment was made in the family plot in St. Mary's Cemetery, where the final absolution was pronounced by Father Fant. The bearers, personal friends of the deceased, were John J. Tierney, Frank Olivet, Michael Davitt, John J. Leonard, Frank L. Watzka, John J. Long. There were many beautiful floral pieces, one of the finest being from the pupils of the East Kingston school, which was in recognition of Mr. Hurson's interest in the school and young people of the community.

MISS ADAIRE TO TALK AT HIGH SCHOOL MONDAY

Miss Jeane Adaire, nationally famous culinary authority and home making expert, who is known to most Kingston women through her radio programs, will address the pupils of the high school at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning as a part of her program while in this city. There has been a marked stimulation of interest in domestic science affairs lately, as evidenced by the attendance at the modern kitchen on display at Rose & Gorman's which so far has been attended by over 7,000 persons.

Among the visitors Friday at the model kitchen was Miss Nellie Davenport, domestic science instructor at the high school, with her pupils.

After Miss Adaire's appearance at the high school she will go to the Rose & Gorman store where she is giving a lecture and demonstration of her methods Monday and Tuesday afternoons.

Adds a new departure to his already large Mortuary.

COLONIAL BURIAL CO.

Due to the depression and general depletion of the family treasure, Mr. Murphy, through the manufacturers he has come in contact with during his many years of experience in the undertaking business, he has accomplished a life-long desire. That is to be able to produce an entire funeral for $100.00

That will be in keeping with the dignity and dependability required to come to Mr. Murphy's usual high standard of service.

This entire service will consist of Embalming and Dressing, Couch Casket, genuine hard-wood nicely trimmed with Extension Handles, Pine outside box painted and filling the requirements of New York State Laws and rules for shipping, Woman's Dress or Man's Suit, hearse to any cemetery within 15 miles, Candles when requested, also use of Chapel when required.

Mr. Murphy succeeded his father, the late John J. Murphy, who conducted the undertaking business at 140 and 142 Broadway for many years.

Sensing the changes necessary in the Mortuary profession he purchased the commodious Colonial Homestead at

46 MAIDEN LANE

Particularly adapted for his business.

Abandoning the undertaking shop on a busy business street and establishing a dignified in a quiet residential district where a funeral service may be conducted without the annoyance of noise and traffic, Mr. Murphy will still carry in stock the large and well adapted assortment of caskets for every purse, the price of caskets ranging from $50.00 to $1,500, which he has always had on exhibition in his Show Rooms. Patience

FUNERAL HOME

Supposin' fish don't bite at fust—
What am yo' gwine to do?
Throw down yo' pole, an' chuck yo' bait —
An' say yo' fishin's through?
Yo' bet yo' ain't—Ye' is goin' to fish
N' fish, 'n', fish, 'n' wait.
Suppose success don't cum at fust—
What am yo' goin' to do?
Throw up de sponge an' kick yo'self
N' grow! an' fret an' stew?
Yo' bet yo' ain't—yo' is goin' to fish,
You'll bait, 'n' bait agin,
Until success jes' grabs yo' hook,
Yo' grit am she' to win.

Rastus—Ah wus out on a neckin' party las' night.

The popular song "Now's the Time to Fall in Love," will certainly be out of order since it costs three cents to mail a love letter.

By the time a man has been in a pantry five minutes he has uttered sixteen complaints about the way the house is managed.

Absent-Minded Professor — Hello! How's your wife?

The Man—Oh, I'm not married yet, you know.

Absent-Minded Professor—To be sure. Then your wife is still single, too.

WONDER IF THIS IS SO? It is safe to bet that the more a woman does on her face, the less she does in the kitchen.

Freddie (aged five, in a candy store)—How many of these sweets do I get for a penny, please?

Clerk—Oh, six or seven.

Freddie—I'll have seven, please.

PLAIN AND FANCY HASH—Opportunities might be more easily recognized if they didn't so often come disguised as hard work.... Too often a girl who marries for a home doesn't stay in it half the time.... Waste of time or materials is costly to someone. In the end it costs the fellow who wastes...."Spanking in the end never appeals to a child," opines a New York professor; but someone is sure to point out that it is the best place for it.... Teeth are the fence posts which should hold the tongue in captivity....No one yet ever megaphoned his way into the hall of fame.... You can always spot the high literary entertainment by the number of vacant seats.... It's a wise candidate who realizes he is licked before he spends too much money.... The tragedy of the flea is that he knows for a certainty that all his children will go to the dogs .... Parents with daughters in college soon find out they have to make allowances for them.

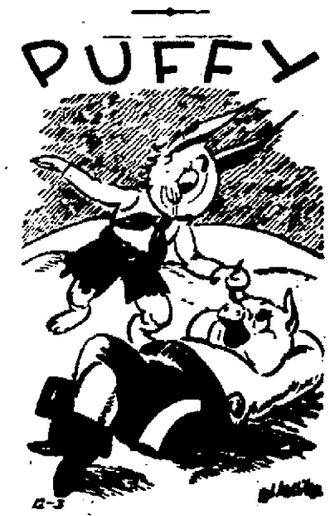
Forests and Agriculture

Forests, aside from their timber value, are necessary to watersheds, to the prevention of erosion, the prevention or retarding of floods. They help to raise or maintain underground watertables upon which agriculture is dependent.



Bunny wakes Puff with a tug at his ear.
"Get up," shouts the Rabbit. "The treasure is here.
We've found an old chest that is heavy as lead."

Middle West Places Four On 1932 All American

Associated Press Team Features Big Line, Fast Backs

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—For the fourth successive year football stars who develop their brilliance in the great American midlands dominate the All-America team of 1932.

Their margin over the other three main sectors of the gridiron battle-front is not so pronounced as the past two seasons but, Mid-Western players occupy four of the first eleven positions in the honor line-up. The East and the South, including Texas, each gain three places and the Far West only one in the eighth annual All-America compiled by The Associated Press.

The All-America squad of 33 players, including the "shock troops" of the second and third elevens, numbers 12 from the East, eight from the Mid-West, seven from the South and six from the Far West.

The selections climax a season in which great teams rather than great individuals, scintillated. There were a number of flashing ball-carriers especially in the South, but outstanding teams like Colgate, which was not scored on in nine straight victories; Texas Christian, Auburn, Michigan, Pittsburgh, Southern California and Purdue all achieved fine records because of balanced, well-drilled strength.

Newman Stands Out

Fine support enabled Harry Newman, Michigan's resourceful and versatile quarterback, to emerge as one of the season's few dominating individuals. As a result of the stellar role he played in bringing about most of the Wolverine triumphs, by passing, running or kicking, Newman was virtually the unanimous choice of the nation's experts for the job of quarterbacking the 1932 all-stars. He is without question the ablest field general since Frank Carideo piloted two straight unbeaten Notre Dame teams. He excels Carideo as a passer and ball-carrier.

Two other mid-western aces, Paul Moss, rangy Purdue end, and Joe Kurth, brilliant Notre Dame tackle, shared the distinction of being outstanding selections, although close observers felt there was little to choose in consistent performance between Kurth and his running mate in the Rambler line, Ed Krause.

Don Zimmerman, Tulane's fleet back who had his greatest season despite the loss of experienced running mates, and Captain Milton Summerfelt, stalwart Army guard, also were clear-cut choices of the big majority of critics.

Injuries Shelve Three

The contests and rivalry for other positions all were keen as a variety of factors figured in the tabulation of final All-America results. Injuries balked the chances of Ernest (Pug) Rentner, Northwestern's 1931 all-star half-back, gaining this honor again. A broken ankle in mid-season against Harvard abruptly shelved Dick King, regarded by Major Ralph Sasse as one of the greatest ends in West Point history. The doctors kept Orville Mohler, Southern California's field general and the outstanding back on the Pacific coast, from finishing his career as an All-American.

King's inability to finish the season left the race for the other flank position wide open. It was won, after a flock of arguments, by the fiery young Mexican, Jose Martinez-Zorilla of Cornell, whose amility to knife through interference, rise to emergencies and block kicks combines to furnish a fine running mate for Paul Moss, a specialist in pass-catching and punting as well as an excellent defensive end.

Latest of an exceptional family to gain gridiron fame at Cornell, Martinez-Zorilla has finished three colorful and consistently brilliant years of competition. He blocked a half dozen punts in important games this season and, single-handed, almost held Pennsylvania to even terms by his thrilling end play in his final game.

Few Great Ends

As a group, the ends lacked the class of other seasons. Joe Skladany of Pittsburgh, who has another year to improve, caught the popular eye with his sensational pass-catching in the Army game, but was not as consistent as his team-mate, Ted Dailey. Tony Matel of Columbia shown on the receiving end of passes, besides playing a fine defensive game. Frank Meadow was a key performer in Brown's stout defense. Dud Parker, Yale punter, did a remarkable job in shifting from the backfield to end.

The South this season had no ends as colorful as "Catfish" Smith or Dairymple, but "Gump" Ariail of Auburn, Dan Wood of Furman and Virgil Rayburn of Tennessee turned in fine performances. Madison Pruitt was a conspicuous unit in the famous Texas Christian line, while "Snakebite" Nisbet of Washington and Frank Slavich of Santa Clara won praise on the Pacific Coast. The Big Ten, in addition to Moss, had a number of excellent ends, including Williamson and Petoskey, used as a fullback, of Michigan; Sidney Gillman of Ohio State and Dick Fencl of Northwestern.

Kurth, a polished lineman in every respect, and Ernie Smith, trombone-playing star of the Southern California forwards, easily won the favor of experts for the tackle positions. Their running mates, Krause of Notre Dame and "Tay" Brown of U. S. C., were their principal rivals and were given the preference in some minority reports. Pennsylvania's Howard Colehower, Pittsburgh's Walton, Cornell's Abe George and Duke's Freddie Crawford also were standouts. Brown University struck an unusual note by having a pair of Brown brothers in the tackle positions.

Powerful Center Trio

The center trio, all important in a modern game that calls for agility, speed and blocking by the guards, plus rare defensive skill by a roving pivot, developed another series of arguments before the All-America places were allotted.

In the choice of running mate for Summerfelt at guard, the added weight and drive of Captain Johnny Vaught of Texas Christian gave him the edge over Captain Bob Smith, key man of Colgate's sturdy line. At center, Lawrence Ely of Nebraska, foremost lineman the Big Six has developed since the days of Ed Weir, gets the call over "Pete" Gracey, Vanderbilt's great snapper-back.

Ely, big and powerful, not only opposed exceptional rivals in his own territory, such as Paul Young of Oklahoma, but successfully combated such intersectional foes as Minnesota and Pittsburgh. He helped give the Pitt Panthers the toughest afternoon they had all season. Gracey is classed as the best center the South has produced since Peter Pund of Georgia Tech. Without him, Vanderbilt's defense was riddled in its closing game with Alabama.

The Big Ten had two fine centers in Charles Bernard of Michigan and Ed Oehler, Purdue captain. The best in the East were Tom Gilbane of Brown and Roy Engle of Pennsylvania. Art Krueger of Marquette, who blocked no less than eight kicks in seven games, won high praise. Coates of U. C. L. A. was regarded by some as the best center on the Pacific Coast.

Fast, Versatile Backfield

The quartet selected for the All-America backfield emphasizes the importance of forward passing in the modern game. Harry Newman of Michigan, Warren Heller of Pittsburgh, Jim Hitchcock of Auburn and Don Zimmerman of Tulane all rank among the greatest of the collegiate passers. All except Heller are good kickers, with Newman an expert at placements. All can run, block and tackle with the best of talent in these specialties.

All except Zimmerman starred on undefeated teams and the pole-vaulting Tulane athlete's brilliant achievements loom all the greater because he lacked a high-class supporting cast. Despite the fact he no longer had such blockers as Felts and Payne to clear the path for him, Zimmerman was not stopped by any of the stronger teams played by Tulane.

The experts found it difficult to leave off the first string All-America such versatile backs as Beattie Feathers of Tennessee, Cliff Montgomery of Columbia and George Sauer of Washington State. Although not quite so polished a performer as Heller, Pittsburgh's Mike Sebastian frequently proved tougher to bring down in a broken field. The Southwest's critics ranked Harrison Stafford of Texas as the best running, blocking and passing back since the days of Gerald Mann and Joel Hunt.

Many Fine Backs

The Big Ten had a flock of great backs, including Lew Hinchman of Ohio State, Duane Purvis and Roy Horstmann of Purdue, Jack Manders of Minnesota and Gil Berry of Illinois. Cornell's captain, Bart Viviano, probably outranks any defensive back in the country for the deadliness of his tackling. Notre Dame has two complete sets of backs, who performed with impartial success in the Army rout, but Mike Koken and George Melinkovich probably have the most class. Colgate's triple threat, Whitey Ask, performer like an All-American against Brown, in a game which saw the star of Bob Chase, smart Bruin field general, dimmed for the first time during the season.

As a punter and passer, Ed Danowski of Fordham ranks with any back in the country. Army's Felix Vidal was a "ball of fire" until he bumped into the Notre Dame steamroller, but Harvard and Yale will testify he looked like the greatest broken-field runner in the country. Dixie Roberts of Vanderbilt, Frank Christensen of Utah, Bob Lassiter of Yale, Jack Cain of Alabama all packed terrific ball-toting drive. So did Bob Monnett of Michigan State and George Sauer of Nebraska.

"Baby Coach"

Conference rivals thought nothing of it when Miami University employed Frank Wilton, former Stanford star, to coach its 1932 football squad. But they feel differently since he piloted his very first eleven to the Buckeye crown.

SPORT SLANTS

By Alan J. Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

"Slip" Madigan can take a joke as well as the next fellow, but he'll argue long and loud that he did not pull the prize coaching bone of the season by sending one of his St. Mary's backs into the California game twice in one period.

"I may not be as smart as I should be, but I'll swear I'm not so dumb that I don't know how many times my fullback has been in one quarter of a ball game," he declared.

"As a matter of fact, this is what happened:

"My regular fullback, Partee, had a torn ligament in his leg. Any kind of a hard knock might put him out for the season. I started Dodson against California, with no intent at all of using Partee.

"But on the very first play Dodson messed up a play down near our own goal line. He started to wring his hands and show signs that he was greatly disturbed. I saw that and immediately got frightened over the possibility of his getting so upset that he'd miss a signal, or a pass, or something, and get us in a hole.

"So I rushed in Partee, ordering him to do as little as possible, so that I could get Dodson on to the bench and calm him down. Dodson responded nicely to treatment. But I was terribly anxious to get Partee out of there at the first possible moment, which would be the end of the period, and get Dodson, the sound player, back in the game.

Watched the Referee

"The referee was handling his first major assignment. When it got close to the end of the period, I kept my eyes on him. He blew his whistle.

"Now, when a referee does that, and the ball is not in play, it can be only one of two things—time out or the end of the period. If it's time out, the referee points to the side taking the time, or to himself, so that the timer will know who is to be charged with the rest.

"The referee blew his whistle and pointed nowhere. I thought it was the end of the period. Dodson then was eligible to relieve Partee, starting a new quarter. I rushed him out on the field.

"As a matter of fact the quarter wasn't over at all. The referee was calling time out, and it was still the first period. Immediately I knew what had happened, but I couldn't make an outcry without being penalized myself. The referee did not ask the St. Mary's captain, as the rules require, whether he accepted the substitute.

Bears Caught It

"Instead a play was called, and the smart California boys, waiting until the game was legally on again, massed on the referee and demanded we be penalized for putting Dodson in twice in the same quarter. The official had no other choice than to grant that request.

"And I looked like the prize bonehead of the season."

One of Madigan's listeners had a consoling word for him.

"Chic Meehan, at Manhattan, sent the same player in twice in one period, and it wasn't discovered until the next Monday," he said.

Comforter Fives Play This Evening

The regular weekly basketball games will be played at Comforter Hall, Wynkoop Place, tonight as follows: Comforter Juniors vs. Leader Five at 6:30; Rocknes vs. Comforter Girls at 7:30, and Comforter Seniors vs. Redeemers at 8:30 o'clock.

It is presumed that the feature battle, bringing together the two Sunday School League rivals, will be one showing plenty of action and that there will be a record crowd on hand to witness it. The preliminaries also promise much especially the girls' game, the Comforters being anxious to even matters with the Rocknes who defeated them recently.

Next Wednesday the Comforter Seniors will travel to Malden for a contest with the Bigelows, the team which defeated them at Comforter Hall last week. The Napanoch Guards will be opponents of the Comforters at their hall next Saturday.

Seat Sale Indicates Big Crowd for Bouts Of Elks Next Monday

The committee in charge of selling reserved seats for the Elks' benefit boxing bouts at their club on Fair street, Monday evening, starting at 8:30, expects the ringside section to be filled. According to reports, orders for "close-up" chairs are deluging the ticket agents and talk among the bleacher patrons presages a rush for the low-priced seats. Indications are that the crowd will surpass any so far and that the bouts will be as gingery as the fine card put on last week.

Headed by the sizzling scrap between two colored heavyweights, Willie Barrow of Poughkeepsie, who won, and Sid Arthur, Brooklyn puncher, and showing Adam Unverzach and Joe Pincus in the rubber of a series, last week's scraps were the best seen in Kingston in some time.

Monday's bill, headed by the match between Otis Paradise, Brooklyn whirlwind, and Tony White, Pittsfield strong boy, gives promise of being in the same class with last week's pugilistic show. Adam Unverzach, Ellenville pride, who defeated Pincus, is again booked to appear in the semi-final, meeting Paul Renault, a stablemate of Paradise. Renault is expected to give the protege of Rosendale Jack Daley a harder go than did his Kingston rival.

Another scrap that should go well is the six rounder between Johnny Marello, Glasco boy, and Buddy Emerson, St. Remy pride, who have been waiting for a long time to climb into the roped arena together.

There are four four-rounders scheduled, one showing Battling Lurie, downtown "fall downer" against Joe Benjamin, "Saugerties windmill."

Bill Singer will referee the bouts.

Highland Loses To Baltimore Orioles

The Highland American Legion basketball team outscored the Baltimore Orioles in the first half of their contest at Smith's Hall, Highland, Friday night but could not hold the colored experts in the second session when Steele, the right forward, broke loose to give the visiting club an advantage which had piled up to eight points more than Highland's when the closing whistle sounded. Final tally was 58-50.

Highland's chief point-maker was McAuley, center, who gleaned 19. Murphy with 12 and Craig with 10 were next in line.

On Friday night, December 9, the Highland club will play host to the Saugerties Big Five at Smith's Hall. This match is expected to draw a large crowd.

R. Palen Wins in Brilliant Tourney

Richard Palen broke into the winning column in the Kaslich billiard tourney last night when he defeated Clifton Quick 100 to 93. The game was rather carelessly played by both men and several times they missed chances that would have given either a certain victory. However Palen tightened in the last few innings and won by the narrow margin of 7 balls.

There will be no match Monday night because of the Elk's charity boxing show but on Tuesday, Fred Planthaber, who is expected to be an outstanding star of the tournament will meet an opponent as yet unchosen for his first match in the tournament.

Three Local Boxers Victorious Friday

George Fay, cauliflower ear expert from East Kingston, took four of his pugilists to Haverstraw Friday night and saw three of them turn in victories over formidable opponents. Johnny Raymond of Flatbush, pride of the Fay troupe, finished up Freddy Spurl, a colored belter, in the first round. Jerry Trought started a comeback after being knocked out at the Kingston Elks' Club by outpointing Tommy Reilly, a rough and ready slugger. Joe Myers, another Kingston scrapper, defeated Kid Pauley, and "Doggie" Carpino of East Kingston dropped a close decision to Johnny Dula.

WRESTLING LAST NIGHT

REV. C. B. SMITH DENIES USE OF THE WORD "BUMS."

Mr. Editor:

Please be so kind as to publish the following in today's Freeman and greatly oblige the undersigned.

Last Sunday evening I was one of the speakers at Trinity M. E. Church and urged the people to sign a petition against the repeal of the 18th Amendment or modification of the Volstead Act. Someone is now out with a statement that I said that "all who would not sign that petition were bums." I positively deny the allegation. I am a Christian minister and would not disgrace myself nor my office by such an unchristian remark. I have many times been misquoted and my motives impugned and have never before attemped to set myself right through the press, but this attempt to do me injustice is so flagrant that I ask the courtesy of your paper to deny the charge. CHARLES B. SMITH.

New York City Milk Price Is Reduced

New York, Dec. 3.—A price reduction of 27 cents per 100 pounds on Class 1 fluid milk, in New York city to become effective December 5, was announced by Fred H. Sexauer, president of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., today.

This action followed a meeting with representatives of the New York Milk Conference Board, which includes in its membership all of the larger and reputable dealers of the city as well as many small distributors. The conference board delegates reiterated their unanimous request of November 23 for a lowering of the Class 1 price so that the milk price to consumers could be reduced one cent a quart.

"The Dairymen's League rejected the conference board request of November 23," said Mr. Sexauer, "because we felt that due to low production and cold weather it might be possible to avoid a market break. Conditions, however, have not improved and that a serious competitive condition exists in the metropolitan market is well known.

"Therefore when the conference board representatives returned Friday with their unanimous request repeated, we stated that the Dairymen's League would lower its price approximately one-half cent a quart December 5. This leaves 20 cents per 100 pounds to be absorbed by dealers in making a cent a quart reduction to consumers. This is the largest share distributors have carried in any equal reduction.

"The Dairymen's League pointed out to distributors that they must lower their costs. They were told that freight rates, labor costs and overhead must be reduced. It was pointed out that labor in the milk industry has not taken its proportionate share of reduction in income. The Dairymen's League has already instituted action looking toward lower costs in these directions, and dealers have been told that they must give their assistance so that farmers' burdens due to these costs may be lightened."

Fad for Japanning

During the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries, Lorine Letcher Butler writes in the Brooklyn Eagle, the ladies of fashion looked up japanning as a new kind of fancy work and it vied with embroidery and tapestry making as a feminine diversion, the first instance of an industrial craft taking its place in society. The ladies found it fascinating to copy the funny little figures, the pagodas and the ascending proportions.

Why Suffer With Backaches?

The back is made up of numerous muscles. There are other anatomical features, of course, but when backache is present, it is the muscles and nerves that are affected. Each muscle is controlled by nerves, and all nerves lead to the spine.

The pain is in the muscles of the back and the spinal nerves are inflamed and sore to the touch. In fact, everything indicates that the Lumbago is due to irritated spinal nerves, rendered worse by the retention of kidney wastes.

To overcome Lumbago, then, it is necessary to correct this nerve irritation. This is what Chiropractic does—and it not only relieves the pain, but also removes the conditions causing the Lumbago.
